All That Glisters Not Trusting the Senate Gold in Russian Hills Pullman Bonus Plan

By Arthur Brisbane

"All that glisters is not gold." That is how Shakespeare has it. Not "All is not gold that glitters." Whichever way you put it, the late Nixon-Nierdlinger would now agree with you. An amusement promoter, he was violently interested in a lovely little lady whose admirable exteriors won the title of "Miss St. Louis" in a beauty contest. He married her, promising to make her famous all over the world.

The little lady has just shot and killed him at Nice, in France, telling the police he accused her of "having an Italian lover" and showing cruel finger marks on her throat.

French justice will attend to all that. We remind young gentlemen, "All the beauty of the world, 'tis but skin deep," and you never can tell what you will find a little deeper. A plain, old-fashioned girl, with a white dress, a blue sash and a ribbon or a haircomb in her hair, is perhaps the safest prospect, even though she may not be "Miss Anybody."

Our government, you are told, seeks some way of doing what Great Britain wants done about our navy, without submitting the matter to the United States Senate.

When you have a government that will not give the Senate an opportunity to express its opinion, you know there is something wrong with the government or the Senate, or both.

You read also that the British are alarmed by French plans to build a powerful submarine fleet, regardless of any naval pacts.

We take the orders of Britain and pretend to like them.

But the French, unlike us, are not docile, and they are logical. They have just finished one war, bearing the brunt while England was getting her men ready. They don't mean to have another such experience, and will keep submarines enough to sink anything that floats. In addition, they have the most powerful fighting air fleet in the world.

While this country wonders whether the Russians are quite good enough to do business with us, Germany sends 17 of her biggest industrialists on a trip through Russia. Those gentlemen bring back orders for about seventy-five million dollars' worth of goods, and it is believed that Russian sales in Germany for the current year will amount to $200,000,000, which Germany considers worth having.

The president of the Pullman Company, D. A. Crawford, has arranged for Pullman car conductors to earn "extra money." They will get commissions on sales of upper berths, sales of a whole section to one traveller on favorable terms, also an allowance for convincing passengers that they want better accommodations than those reserved.

This will start salesmanship among Pullman conductors, increase the incomes of many, and perhaps promote similar profit sharing elsewhere. It pays to give men a cash interest in their work.

Mr. Crawford became head of the Pullman Company, suddenly, on the death of his predecessor, Mr. Carry, at the very peak of prosperity. Suddenly the bottom dropped out from under, but he proposes to establish a new bottom.

Washington officials say the soldiers' "bonus money will soon be spent for NEW goods, little of it spent to pay old debts."

We believe that buying new goods to the extent of a billion dollars or thereabouts will do more than anything else could to stimulate prosperity.

Paying off old debts would also help.

However, the money belongs to the soldiers, and is theirs to do with as they please. What they do is their business.

Certainly it can only help the nation to pay a billion or a billion and a half to those that have earned it, and will spend it.

The War Department yesterday announced the allotment of $75,000,000 for river and harbor work. The Missouri river gets the largest allocation, more than $6,000,000. This will put a good many men to work.

Seventy-five million dollars seems a good deal of money, but it really isn't much for this rich country.

Little Holland, short of land, stealing it from the North Sea by building dikes, and filling in, is spending $75,000,000 now on one single reclamation project. All depends on how wisely you use your money.

If human beings could put an end to war, with its frightful expense, that runs into billions a

Massachusetts First to Ask Dry Law Repeal Action

RESOLUTION WILL GO TO CONGRESS

Similar Move by Three Other States Would Force National Action

Massachusetts is the first state in the Union to take action, under Article 5 of the Constitution, for the repeal or modification of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Resolutions, amended in the Senate and concurred in today in the House, requests Congress either to call a convention of the states for the purpose of taking action, or itself propose amendments for ratification by conventions in the several states.

If 31 additional states follow Massachusetts, Congress will be forced to take action.

The resolutions will be submitted to the President of the Senate and the speaker of the House in Washington by Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook.

Blizzard Sweeps Western New York

Rochester, N. Y., March 13 (AP)—Huge snow drifts, piled up by a stiff northwest wind, today blocked all except main highways in western New York.

Coming as the aftermath of a four-day snowfall, town and county highway forces were faced with the task of keeping roads clear in the face of a 35-mile wind.

Near Canandaigua, an Auburn branch locomotive of the New York Central Railroad was derailed by a drift a dozen miles south of Rochester, which held up traffic on both tracks for five hours.

Nashua, N. H., March 13—While Patrolman Robert E. Meunier, shot through the head in line of duty, lay at the point of death in Memorial Hospital here today, James McCann, his alleged assailant, was arraigned in municipal court on a charge of attempted murder.

According to the police version of the shooting, McCann, a 25-year-old asbestos worker, had attended a party across the river in Hudson and was loitering in an intoxicated condition on Meunier's beat on Worcester st. Meuni helped him to his home and warned him to stay off the streets.

Defense Eager to Learn of Identity of Mrs. Ellis' Mysterious Caller

By Staff Correspondent

Haverhill, March 13—Russell Noble, alleged hammer slayer, may admit being at the home of Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, but deny attacking and killing her, according to his friends.

Such a claim on the part of the defense would paint the 17-year-old boy as the victim of a grim jest—entering the mansion after midnight and finding the wealthy widow battered and dying.

Coupled with the intensive grilling of the police, his consciousness of guilt with respect to the robbery would have the psychological effect of inducing him to give answers that constituted a confession to murder they said.

The defense today was still seeking to learn the identity of the mysterious caller at the Ellis mansion on the night of the attack, and more about recent parties attended by the widow, at which quarreling is said to have occurred.

Statements that the many bruises on the body of the hammer victim were received while skiing at the Country Club were ridiculed by Atty. Richard J. McCormick.

FRESH BRUISES

Police admit that it was the bruises which led to the decision to have a special examination made of the organs.

The bruises were fresh black and blue marks, and had they been received while skiing the previous week-end would have taken on a yellowish hue by the time of the attack, the defense points out.

Persons who were observers of the country club party say Mrs. Ellis did not put on skiis that day and other friends say she had not done so all winter. The locations of the bruises also tend to disprove this theory, according to Noble's attorneys.

Haverhill, March 13—Two school girls, a suitcase, a young man and an irate parent gave the police a bad hour today.

It started with a call from a Wingate st. leather plant that told of a blossoming "elopement."

Patrolman James Feaney was first on the scene and found Pire Palermo of Bartlett st., Marion Corrigan of Washington st., each 15, Salvatore Belfiore, 17, a factory employe, and the father of the Palermo girl, apparently with no signs of agreement.

The locale changed to police headquarters where Capt. William A. Gavin heard the girls' story that they had planned a short trip but no elopement—merely bidding Belfiore goodbye.

At Capt. Gavin's suggestion the trip was postponed and quiet reigned in Wingate st.

U. S. AGENTS TO MOP UP BOSTON

Special investigators from Washington are working under cover in Greater Boston in preparation for a great liquor "mop up" by Federal prohibition forces, it was revealed today.

Every known speakeasy and drinking place in and about the city is said to be under surveillance by the agents, who are also watching liquor-running automobiles and drug stores.

According to information obtained, the coming drive is to be the most comprehensive yet made in this section, with no quarter shown purveyors of illicit liquor.

The special investigators, it is said, will make reports to Washington on evidence already obtained here regarding liquor selling in speakeasies and drug stores.

It is understood the reports will be presented at the school for prohibition agents to be started in Washington shortly with 24 instructors from the prohibition bureau.

No statement could be obtained from the office of Rev. Jonathan Lewis, prohibition administrator. Maj. Henry E. Goodenough, his assistant, said he had not received or read the instructions from Washington regarding the "mop-up."

Hoover Pleased With Recovery of Business

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

(Copyright, 1931, Universal Service, Inc.)

Washington, March 13—Sensing a significant improvement in business sentiment, President Hoover is desirous to keep the Government from rocking the boat. This was learned officially today.

President Hoover thinks the time has passed for dramatic business stabilization conferences, such as were held at the White House in November, 1929. The thought now is that spectacular Government gestures in the direction of promoting business recovery would frighten people at this transitional period when natural forces are overcoming the fear psychosis, which reached a climax last December.

The Administration has not relaxed its efforts to be helpful, but is proceeding quietly co-operating with individual sick industries, and keeping its efforts off the first page. The White House points with pride to the recent substantial strides in the cotton textile trade,

DIES TO TEACH MAN A LESSON

Teaching her husband a lesson to stop his drinking ended in death today for Mrs. Ethel Snow Hughes of Dorchester, former stage beauty.

Mrs. Hughes shot herself two weeks ago outside her home at 36 Westwood st., Dorchester.

She told doctors and police she did it herself and left suicide notes to her mother that explained she shot herself "as a lesson to Charles to stop drinking."

The bullet entered the lower left abdomen. Until last night she was reported on the road to recovery, but a sudden turn ended in death this morning.

Her husband, Charles F. Hughes, was arrested by the Dorchester police at the time of the shooting, but later released from a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He submitted to a blood transfusion shortly after the shooting.

The note addressed to her mother at the time of the shooting read:

"My husband is a good boy and I love him, but I want him to stop his drinking and I hope this will be a lesson to him. Love to all."

MARGARET INNES

COX QUIZZED ON GARRETT 'WIRE'

The telegram which Frederick Cox, a witness, declined to produce at the Garrett trial yesterday until ordered to do so by Judge Elias Bishop, was read in evidence today.

It was from Miss Margaret Innes of the Back Bay, who as a previous witness had testified to attending champagne dinner at the Hotel Ritz with Oliver B. Garrett and his wife, with Lillian V. Hatch, now on trial on charges of conspiring to extort from John F. Sullivan, the Ritz proprietor.

It was dated Feb. 26 and sent to Cox at West River, N. S. As read by Danie. J. Gallagher, counsel for the two women defendants, it was as follows:

DIDN'T THINK HE HAD IT

"I have been subpoenaed to testify in the case about which I have written to you. I have talked to the authorities and told them everything. Please come at once. Expenses both ways."

Cox, still on the stand in Suffolk Superior Court, was asked why he question of an anonymous letter-writer, but she is declared to have denied attending a dance in Lawrence with the accused boy the night before the crime.

Police investigators today said they were as much interested in this mysterious visitor as is the defense, and that they would question him if he were identified. But they made it clear they believe his story will bolster the government's case, not the boy's.

Residents in the vicinity of Summer st. and Maple ave., where Mrs. Ellis lived, have told the authorities there were lights showing in the mansion as late as 12:15 on the morning of the crime, or up to about an hour before young Noble told his alleged confession, said he went there.

Lieut. Ovila J. Lagasse of the Haverhill police and State Detective Richard Griffin made another visit to the house today and reinspected the scene. The room where the widow was fatally injured is locked and Lagasse has the key.

CAUSED BY STRUGGLE

Medical Examiner Francis W. Anthony, questioned about the many bruises on the woman's body, admitted they might have been caused by a violent struggle and that the overturned chair and floor lamp might indicate the same thing. Nothing of this was mentioned in the boy's alleged admissions under police grilling.

There are numerous indications that much more took place than young Noble is alleged to have told of.

Some of the investigators hold to the theory that the cloth stained with blood found in the washbowl in the bathroom adjoining the bedroom was used to wipe the blood off the hammer, which when found outside in the snow was entirely free of stains.

The two maids were sleeping at the rear of the house and this, it is believed would account for their having heard no sound of what may have been a long struggle.

The law that provides a mental examination for persons accused of murder may react against the view that demands a life for a life.

ALIENISTS CALLED

It was learned today that two State alienists have been requested to examine the boy in the Essex County jail in Lawrence by Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg, whose duty it will be to ask the electric chair for young Noble, unless he is declared insane.

In capital cases it is customary for a county prosecutor to await the decision of a grand jury before asking the mental examination, but because a boy is involved, Dist. Atty. Cregg believes an early examination would be to the advantage of the State in this case.

The names of the alienists who are to make the mental test for Noble will probably be announced within a few days.

Defense plans were forecast by the continual activity of Attorney McCormick in seeking to establish the identity of Mrs. Ellis' nine o'clock visitor on the night preceding the attack and in investigating the Washington's birthday week-end party over which Mrs. Ellis presided as hostess.

This week-end of gaiety celebration by Mrs. Ellis and a number of friends may play a prominent part in young Noble's case.

Attorney McCormick is checking reports that the week-end affair was marked by a violent quarrel in which at least two were involved and which was only ended when one of the participants left in a huff, and went to New York.

ACCIDENT THEORY HIT

The week-end party, which began at the Haverhill Country Club on the Saturday night preceding the attack, was adjourned to the home of Mrs. Ellis on Sunday and continued there until late Tuesday afternoon, when all but one of the guests left.

The remaining guest, a woman, the wife of a former celebrated college football player, left the Ellis home on Wednesday morning for her home in another state.

PLANNED A TRIP

Another important discovery which is being carefully checked today by defense attorneys is that Mrs. Ellis had planned to go to New York on a week-end visit on the Saturday following her attack.

Mrs. Ellis had made reservations at the Hotel Commodore in New York for a three-day stay.

Neither police nor her friends were able today to give her reason for the proposed trip.

What bearing the trip may have in preparation for Noble's defense was also left unexplained by Atty. Hugh A. Cregg.

POLICE EJECTED

One of the biggest surprises if Noble goes to trial may be the calling of a Haverhill police official as a defense witness.

This official, the first police officer to arrive at the Ellis mansion, was ordered to leave by Mrs. George K. Clement, sister-in-law of the victim, and was not readmitted until the arrival of George Kimball Clement, a brother of the victim, nearly an hour later.

No reasonable excuse has been offered for ejecting the officer, either by the officer himself or by Mrs. Clement.

Mrs. Clement might be called as a witness to explain why she ordered the police official from the Ellis home when he sought to probe the attack.

NO THUMB PRINTS

Another important angle of the case, brought out during the hearing of Noble on Wednesday, which may result in much questioning by Attorney McCormick is the admission by Inspector Herbert Cassily that no thumb prints were found and that the police designated the scenes and articles which were photographed by the state police photographer at the Ellis home.

In his testimony Inspector Cassily said:

"George Kimball Clement designated the spot where the hammer was found so the state police photographer could photograph it."

He made a similar admission when questioned concerning photographs and furniture.

THEFT THEORY GAINS

Police scored another important point when they sought the reported $150 trust fund which was reported to have been held for Noble in the Old Colony Trust Co. in Boston and failed to find it.

State Detective John Stokes and Joseph Ferrari were closeted with bank officials for more than three hours.

There was no record to show that this money was ever on deposit in the Boston bank.

The discovery that Noble had no funds in the bank strengthened the police theory that Noble's purpose in entering the house was to steal and that he killed Mrs. Ellis when discovered.

had said yesterday it had nothing to do with the trial.

"I did not think I had that telegram with me," he said.

He said he had another, which was not from Miss Innes. After court yesterday he said he talked the matter over with Miss Innes, and later it was brought out he had seen Mrs. Stella Fraser, another government witness. He denied he had discussed the trial with her.

DESTROYED LETTER.

In addition to the telegram read yesterday, promising him $100 if he would come to Boston, and that read today, Cox said he had received a letter from the Back Bay dressmaker.

He had destroyed it, he said, because he had no further use for it.

Upon his arrival from Nova Scotia, Cox said he called first at Miss Innes' home, then on the district attorney and then at Mrs. Fraser's home before registering at the hotel where he is staying. He said he expected to be paid by the State for his expenses, but had not taken the matter up with the authorities.

Deputy Police Supt. James McDevitt took the stand, but said he could not identify two purported signatures of Garrett because they were not written in his presence.

SALESMAN ON STAND

Wallace Elkerton, salesman of dairy equipment, testified he sold about $6000 worth for the Pine Grove Dairy Farm at Hingham, and Ernest Rhind, credit manager of a dairy machinery company testified Garrett once told him of the dangers of being a policeman and that he would get out of the force if the dairy business "got going right."

A statement of incorporation of the farm was introduced, showing the officers to have been Allen H. Wood, Jr., Hazel Wood and Annie M. Kane.

Testimony regarding the sale of real estate to Mrs. Garrett was given by J. Edward Callahan, Newton realtor.

Dist. Atty. Warren I. Bishop and his former chief, ex-Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell, engaged in a spirited argument in Superior Court at East Cambridge today. Bushnell was defense counsel.

Judge John M. Gibbs sentenced the youths to Concord for eight years each. They are James Gallagher, 23, of Hillside st., Roxbury; John McGlynn, 23, of Belvidere st., Back Bay; William Cornet, 19, Walden st., Cambridge, and John J. Gannon, 26, Gloucester st., Back Bay.

"Mr. Bushnell as district attorney sent a 20-year-old youth to the electric chair for killing a storekeeper," said Bishop.

"Every time a gunman shows his head in this county, I intend to hit it. Although young and without past records, these defendants had men's weapons and should get men's sentences."

NOBLE VISITORS CUT DOWN TO ONE A WEEK

By a Staff Correspondent

Lawrence, March 13—Friday the 13th brought bad news to Russell Noble, 17-year-old alleged hammer slayer.

Beginning today his visitors will be limited to one a week, in accordance with the regular rule of the Essex County jail.

Previously he has been allowed as many as he wished, but since he has been formally held to await grand jury action, by order of Judge Winn, he must now conform to the general rule which applies to all such inmates.

Keeper George Bunting explained that the boy's attorneys, Richard J. McCormick and Leo M. Finen, may visit him at any time.

BATHED AND SHAVED

Outside of this ruling of the keeper, it was a pleasant day for the boy. It was "baths and cleanup day," as the inmates call it, and young Noble seemed to enjoy it to the limit.

With six other prisoners in his section of the institution, he was sent under the shower baths, and stayed under the water until the guard had to order him out.

Next he was taken to the exercise room where he inspected with interest the three antiquated barber chairs. Getting into one he had a hair trim and shave, and gave careful instructions to the barber on how to do it.

STILL MODEL PRISONER

When a mirror was brought to him, he surveyed himself closely and then asked for the comb and arranged his prominent shock of curly blonde hair himself.

"The boy's behavior during the next few days will determine whether or not I'll find some work for him to do around here," said Keeper Bunting. "He wants something to do, but he won't get it unless he shows he is going to continue to behave himself.

"He's still a model prisoner, undisturbed by events of the past few days, and he doesn't talk about his case to anybody."

SUIT MAY BALK $2,283,000 PAY TO G. W. HILL

New York, March 13 (AP)—Having carried on a heated debate on whether an executive is worth a million dollars a year, Wall St. suddenly finds that apparently it has one in its midst who received twice that amount in 1930.

The American Tobacco Company is estimated to have paid its president approximately $2,283,000 last year, and his services thus rewarded were extraordinary, as viewed from the annual earnings statement.

PROFIT UP 48 MILLIONS.

In a year that was either lean or unprofitable for many leading corporations the largest tobacco industry piled up a net income of $43,000,000, more than 40 per cent greater than in 1929.

Nevertheless, the controversy rages over how a big corporation should reward executives. Starting with litigation over the bonus system adopted by Bethlehem Steel, which netted its president well over a million in 1929, a group of American Tobacco stockholders, headed by Richard Reid Rogers, has obtained permission of the State Supreme Court to inspect the company's books to learn details of its stock bonus.

$30,000,000 BONUS.

The 1930 pay check of American Tobacco's president, George Washington Hill, amounted to a cool million, and in addition the distribution of stock to employes put 13,460 shares into his strong box at the low price of $25 a share, or a discount of about $1,283,000 from the current market price.

Mr. Rogers and his group charge the plan amounted to a bonus of about $30,000,000. He seeks to enjoin this sale of stock to "insiders" at bargain prices.

300 JOIN PROTEST AGAINST HARVARD MEMORIAL CHAPEL

BACK CATHOLIC AND JEWISH STUDENTS

Proposed War Tribute Is Opposed Because of Religious Objections

More than 300 Harvard undergraduates, alumni, and members of the faculty have signed a petition protesting the plans for erection in Harvard Yard of a non-sectarian chapel in memory of the university's war-dead, supporting a pamphlet issued by an opposing faction today in which it is claimed that Catholic and Jewish students will be unable to worship in the structure.

The petition, put out by a small group of alumni and posted throughout the university, reads:

"We, the undersigned, officers, alumni and students of Harvard University, while entirely in sympathy with the project of providing a memorial to the Harvard men who gave their lives in the World War, are unalterably opposed to the present plans for a memorial in the form of a chapel."

MAJORITY IN FAVOR

The chapel, which will cost nearly $1,000,000, will be located on the present site of Appleton Chapel in the yard. Work is scheduled to begin on the structure this June.

The majority of the alumni, in contrast to the small opposing group, stand solidly behind the plan and more than $700,000 has already been raised for the express purpose of the chapel's construction.

The pamphlets distributed today represent the latest and most drastic attempt on the part of the undergraduate body to forstall the erection of the chapel.

OBJECTIONS OUTLINED

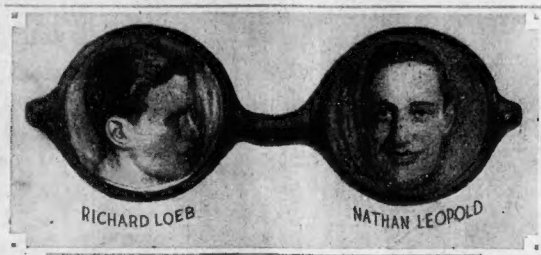
They voice the objection of the majority of students to a religious memorial not compatible to the number of creeds in the university and urge suggestions for another type of structure.

The pamphlet contains a list by religions of the Harvard men who gave their lives during the World War. The list shows 270 Harvard men, professing the Protestant faith, died on the battlefields of France. Ninety Catholic Harvard men gave their all for their country. Twenty Jewish Harvard men, and 10 others including "Agnostics, Christian Scientists, etc." complete the roll of honor as given by the pamphlet.

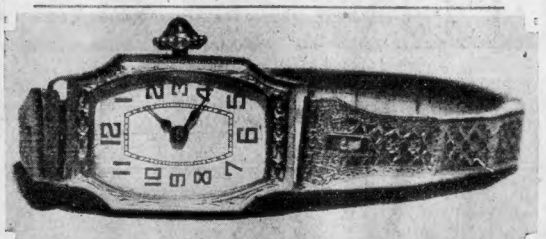
After listing the men and their religions, the pamphlet goes on to say:

"Followers of the Roman Catholic faith are forbidden to worship in any but a formally dedicated church. It is preposterous to believe that Jews, agnostics, and Christian Scientists can have any honest sympathy in a Protestant memorial.

Glasses Trapped Loeb, Leopold; Will Watch Get Noble?



The finding of a pair of tortoise-rimmed glasses led to the conviction of two Chicago boys, Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, scions of rich families. They are serving life sentences in the Illinois State Prison at Joliet, for the killing of little Robert Franks. For days inquiry was on. No tangible clue was at hand. Finally a pair of glasses was found. Through the maker they were traced as being property of Nathan Leopold.



Will the wrist watch, owned by Haverhill's rich widow, Mrs. Clara E. C. Ellis, prove the backbone of the prosecution against Russell Noble? The police say Noble admitted he took this watch from the bedroom of the dead woman. What will the watch story mean to the prosecution? Will it send the "model" boy, a boy whose reputation seemed to be above reproach, to the electric chair? The glasses spelt defeat for Loeb and Leopold.

Slain Husband Made Life 'Hell,' Says 'Cinderella'

UNRUFFLED BY CHARGE

Still smiling despite a murder charge, Russell Noble is held in the Lawrence jail. He, apparently, is showing little concern over the grave charge.

GOADED TO KILL BY NIRDLINGER, BEAUTY ADDS

(Copyright, 1931, by International News Service)

Nice, France, March 13—An intimate account of domestic unhappiness that finally culminated in tragedy came from behind the iron doors of the jail here today, where dimpled Mrs. Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, "Cinderella bride" of the wealthy theater magnate, is being held pending full investigation into her husband's slaying.

LIFE BECAME UNHAPPY

"For the last six months my husband made my life unbearable," she informed International News Service through her attorney, Louis Canetn. "No one could imagine the hell I have been through."

The elderly Philadelphia showman, who first glimpsed his 25-year-old wife when she entered the 1923 Atlantic City international beauty parade as "Miss St. Louis," was fatally shot at his villa on the fashionable Promenade des Anglais, Wednesday night. To police authorities, Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger said she killed him in self-defense when he attempted to choke her.

Unbridled jealousy, intensified by drinking precipitated the fatal quarrel, she claimed. Her attorney declared police surgeons found finger imprints and bruises on her throat and arms.

ACCUSED BY NOTE

Her husband's jealousy dates back six months. The former Charlotte Isabel Nash declared:

"My married life turned desperately unhappy," she added. "My husband was continually accusing me of infidelity, and I accompanied him lately in fear and trembling.

"We often went to the Casino and night clubs, but my husband invariably imagine that some man was endeavoring to flirt with me. He would jump up and insult some innocent man and make terrible threats."

WALKER NAMED IN CHARGES

New York, March 13 (AP)—John Haynes Holmes, clergyman and chairman of the city affairs committee, a citizens' organization, announced today that he would file with Governor Roosevelt specific charges against Mayor Walker, involving "incompetence, gross neglect and indifference to the welfare of the city."

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, vice-chairman of the committee, said he feared waiting until the mayor returned from California and that a decision would be made by the committee today.

CHURCHMEN PROTEST

A committee of directors of the Greater New York Federation of Churches, representing 475,000 members in seven Protestant denominations, has adopted a resolution demanding a non-partisan city-wide investigation "that shall reveal both the innocent and the guilty." Copies were sent to Governor Roosevelt and the legislature.

The Socialist committee on public affairs, headed by Norman Thomas and Morris Hillquit, in letters to the Republican and Democratic leaders of the legislature urged a tri-party investigation, sponsored by the legislature and conducted by representatives of all three parties.

OTHERS IN DRIVE

Other organizations that have taken action are the Citizens' Union, the Institute for Public Service, the Society for Prevention of Crime and the New York Board of Trade. The latter announced the formation of a secret committee, similar to the "Secret Six" in Chicago.

FR. GILDAY IS LAID TO REST

Lawrence, March 13—Lawrence bowed its head today in a public manifestation of grief in tribute to Rev. Fr. John J. Gilday, pastor of St. Patrick's parish, whose funeral took place this morning at 10 o'clock.

Throughout South Lawrence, the section in which the spiritual and moral and civic influence of the beloved clergyman was most exerted, all schools closed this morning. On every public building in the city flags were at half-staff.

Until 8:30 last night the body lay in state in the church. Thousands of parishioners and friends of the priest from all sections filed in and out to look upon the face of the mourned pastor for the last time.

At 8 o'clock this morning the children of St. Patrick's school attended a mass at the church for their pastor.

The funeral was held with a solemn high mass of requiem and was sung by priests of various churches throughout the diocese.

Burial was in the Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

The list of names of those to attend includes such sky riders as Rickenbacker, Balchen, Yancey, Courtney, Chamberlin, Fitzmaurice and Frowley.

"CINDERELLA" BECOMES "THE PERFECT LADY"

Fear caused the "Cinderella" wife of Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, Philadelphia theater magnate, to kill him at Nice, France, according to her story to police there. "If I hadn't killed him, he would have slain me," she said. Charlotte Isabel Nash went to Atlantic City in 1923 as "Miss St. Louis." She was crowned "Miss America" at the pageant of American pulchritude. Nirdlinger met her, liked her. Their engagement came as a great surprise. Then followed Nirdlinger's statement, "I will make her the most attractive woman in all history." Then came what the husband called "the remaking process." The dimpled-cheeked beauty was sent to finishing schools. She learned social graces. She was taught to ride horses. Singing and piano was added. Proper speech was emphasized by husband. Finally the honeymoon with the socially graceful bride.

Uncle Sam Lifts Ban on 5 Classics

Washington, March 13 (AP)—Five literary classics once taboo by Uncle Sam have obtained official sufferance in this country under liberalization of censorship effected by the 1930 tariff act.

The Arabian Nights, the Memoirs of Casanova, Rabelais' "Gargantua and Pantagruel," the Decameron of Boccaccio, and Apuleius' "The Golden Ass" have been recognized by the treasury as classics, and admitted for importation. His notice urged the people to carry on "without noise or boasts." It enjoined merchants also to employ the boycott for private gain.

An Arab newspaper today urged Arabs to follow Gandhi's example and discard foreign made clothing.

Wild Dog Pack Kills Eight Deer Near Fitchburg

Fitchburg, March 12 (AP)—Eight deer have been killed in this vicinity during the past week by a pack of wild dogs Game, Warden James A. Peck said today in giving orders that the dogs be killed.

Three of the renegade dogs are ex-called German police dogs and the fourth member of the pack is a mongrel. None has a collar. The dogs have found deer an easy prey in the deep snow.

The dogs are able to travel on the crust, but the deer must flounder through the deep drifts.

NORRIS LOOKS FOR ANOTHER ROOSEVELT

Washington, March 13 (AP)—The national political campaign was underway today, propelled by a second conference of political leaders in as many weeks.

Election of a "progressive president" was called for yesterday by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, in concluding the two-day progressive conference over which he presided.

Prohibition, power, unemployment and the tariff stand out as issues projected from the early swirl of conferences and maneuvers. As for candidates, President Hoover is unchallenged so far within the regular ranks and the Republican National Committee has centered its efforts in support of his administration.

The Progressive conference leaders centered their attacks upon President Hoover and made it plain he was not acceptable. Turning to the Democrats, Senator Norris warned that the platform Chairman Raskob submitted to the Democratic national committee last week was unacceptable as was any candidate sponsoring it.

Norris again declared a third party futile and his remarks were interpreted as a plea to Democrats for a candidate of "Progressive" stamp. His declaration that "we need another Roosevelt in the White House" stirred gossip, but Norris, with a smile, later said he had not "thought" of Governor Roosevelt, Democrat, of New York, in making that statement.

B. SHAW SENDS WORD HE'S DEAD

Cairo? Ekypt. M rahc13 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw has been hoaxed into giving an interview.

The newspaper, Revell, said today that Shaw had been so hotly pursued by admirers that he instructed the hotel porter to "tell 'em I'm dead," but a French journalist got in by scribbling on his card, "Einstein's nephew wants to shake hands with Shaw."

"What do you think of modernism?" the reporter asked Shaw.

"When one's body is so esthetically formed as mine," Shaw replied, "one likes the world to admire it. Nudity puts an end to the Darwinian quarrel, for when they are naked all humans look like gorillas."

When Shaw discovered the hoax he told the journalist he would be forgiven if he would play the same trick on Kipling, who is now at Assuan.

GOOD YARN TILL HIS MA-IN-LAW TOLD OF SOCK

Chicago, March 13 (AP)—It was a good story and Police Sergeant Thomas McDonald was an attentive listener.

"Automobile," he asked as he glanced at the injured head of Harold Emler, who had just come in to make a report.

"No, it was robbers," said Emler. "There were two of them. One held me while the other hit me over the head with a baseball bat. When I woke up, there I was with my head bashed in and I found I had been robbed of $100.

"But I put up a terrific fight. I knocked one down and thought I had killed him. I strike a terrible blow when I am angered."

As Emler spoke, a quiet woman entered the station and sat down near him. He was about to go on with his story when she arose.

"Mr. Officer," said she, "I am Mrs. Paul Semrow. My daughter, Harriet is this man's wife, which would make me his mother-in-law. This morning he beat up his wife. Then he came over and told me he was going to do the same to me. I grabbed up a hammer and cracked him."

Emler sighed as the sergeant led him gently to a cell.

A Reporter's Story of a Famous Maine Murder Case

By PAUL WHELTON

(Who Worked on the Story as a Reporter)

(In previous installments it was related how Louise Gerrish, 19-year-old school teacher of Amherst, Me., was shot to death and then stripped of her clothing by a murderer, one of three town youths who had watched her dance, pajama clad, in her boarding house room.)

And then the newspaper men began to arrive, with one of the latest Jimmie Jones, a photographer. The automobile in which he and his reporter rode down to Maine became bogged down in mud when the car slipped over the shoulder of the road, and when it seemed impossible to get the machine out, Jones went ahead in another vehicle in hope of getting pictures of the murder scenes while there was still light.

In the village he met another photographer and asked his co-worker to drive him out to the boarding house of Louise Gerrish. The photographer, having taken his own pictures, was willing, and they set out in the friend's T-model car.

If you know your T-models, you understand that the feed to carburetor from tank is by gravity and that with a low gasoline supply the feed sometimes fails when the car is headed uphill. This is what happened to Jimmie Jones, already beset with one car failure.

The pair of cameramen were marooned on the hill when Roland McDonald came driving down the slope with the horse and carriage of his father, and the pair hailed him. Jones secured the boy's consent to go down to the village for money and gave him a quarter for himself.

When the boy reached the village he met Jones' reporter, who also gave the boy a quarter. These two quarters were soon to assume importance.

Jones took his pictures, got his plates away for Boston and then joined his fellow newspaper men, grouped around the stove in the postoffice and general store. He decided to send postcards back to Boston but when he attempted to purchase some he learned that his colleagues had bought up the supply. And seeing a good joke, they refused to sell him any.

Taking a chance that they had not purchased their stamps, Jones then set about buying up the stamp supply—and the course of the murder investigation changed with that move.

When Proprietor Dunham of the postoffice and store opened his drawer, Jones saw in its interior a dollar bill that bore significant creases. Already he had heard the story of the missing handbag, which was known to have contained a folded dollar bill, and he became interested quickly, for this bill evidently had been folded in the same manner—once by its length and then over on the width.

The photographer, by adroit questioning, learned that Roland McDonald have given the dollar in payment for 50 cents' worth of chocolates, and that puzzled Jones, for he knew the boy to have had two quarters—more money than any boy of 13 usually possessed at one time in that village.

Drawing his reporter aside Jones told him what he had learned, and then they went quietly in search of Roland. His answers to their questions confirmed their suspicions, and then they passed on the information to Detective James R. Wood of Boston.

Had the boy used his two quarters in buying his chocolates instead of the folded dollar bill taken from Louise Gerrish's handbag, it is probable that the crime never have been solved, for he took so little time in burying the body that he was able to join his classmates in time to sing along with the searching party.

Young McDonald was even calm and cool when he re-enacted the shooting and burial for the officials, carrying one of the detectives in the manner he had transported the body, and lying down in the grave to illustrate how he had placed the body.

The boy was spirited out of town to avoid the wrath of the townspeople and in the following fall was convicted of murder and sent to Maine State Penitentiary at Thomaston for life.

TOMORROW: Read the thrilling story of the murder of Pauline Keyes, of Brookline.

Photographers' sharp eye solved the murder of Louise Gerrish. He spotted a creased dollar bill in a store cash register, put two and two together and the slayer was captured.

Russell Noble's Life Story

Home Broken Up After Mother's Death; Russell Meets Charlotte

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American

In the previous installments of Russell Noble's life story, the model boy's early life and schooling, his hobbies and ambitions, and the crushing blows suffered by him in the loss of his father and mother were described.

CHAPTER 5

Haverhill, March 13—A winsome high school girl brought the first touch of romance into Russell Noble's life.

Overcome by the death of his mother, the youngster experienced weeks of sadness. The Noble boys shut their Howard st. homes, and each of the four sons, took new residences.

Bixby, the oldest, went to live in Lawrence. James remained in this town, Charles married and went to live in Newburyport, the baby sister, Ruth, was taken by a prominent local family, and Russell, the promising high school student, went to live in Bradford.

It wasn't long before Russell met Charlotte Green, whose house was a quarter of mile distant from his aunt's residence, and whom he had seen at high school.

ATTENDED SAME CHURCH

Just kids, the two of them. A school boy and a school girl in a school romance.

It wasn't any secret at the high school, the students will tell you. They all knew that Charlotte was Russell's girl, and no boy tried to "cut out" the prominent high school leader.

"They were sweethearts, all right," his cousin, Mrs. Lucy Rasmussen, commented, as she neared the end of the boy's life story. "She was a wonderful girl, he repeated many times. They would study together. And many a time he ate his Sunday dinner at Charlotte's house. Why he ate over at her house more often than he ate of his own, he wanted to be with her all the time. And she sure liked him. She was proud of him.

"After his Sunday school instruction they went to the same church, you know—invariably the boy would call up and say he was going over to her house to eat."

It was a beautiful romance.

And as young Russell, in the solitude of his cell at the Essex County jail, reminisces, the memories of her friendship and trust, will help soften the sting of the bitter weeks to come.

Many high school girls thought the blond, tousled-haired boy "just grand." Many of them will tell you they envied pretty Charlotte. But from among the batch of sweet, young high school girls, Russell selected Charlotte Green.

They walked to the high school together, he carrying her books.

WEARS FIRST "TUX"

The year Russell met Charlotte he was admitted to membership in the Philomathian Club. He was president of the club when he was dashed into the limelight as a suspect in a murder.

For Charlotte he bought his first tuxedo.

Only love's young dream can appreciate that. Only a boy who has experienced the thrill of wearing his first tuxedo for "his girl," can enjoy the feeling that anguished young Noble when he prepared for the junior prom last year.

The couple made a hit at the dance, Charles Noble declared.

"You know the kid is good looking and when he wore that black 'tux' with starched front and collar, he was a knockout," he said.

When Russell moved to Bradford he added to his paper route 20 customers in that district. To these families, he delivered his papers at 6 o'clock in th morning.

"He went out before breakfast and rain or shine, cold or warm, that boy never missed a morning," Mrs. Sarah Brown, his aunt, added. "Then he returned for breakfast, and went to school with Charlotte. After school he worked at the florist's and then he had the second paper route."

For this extra activity Russell earned $2.

Youngster that he was, demonstrating his self-reliance, Russell contributed to the family budget $5 a week.

"GRAM" HIS FAVORITE

"You must take it, Gram. I must pay my way as I go. It will build me up. Mr. Cary, the minister, says a boy must be able to stand on his own two feet."

In repeating the boy's talk with her, Mrs. Brown continually wept. It has come hard to this woman who has been a "mother" to him, who has tried to guide his paths as his own mother would have done.

But the boy appreciates it. He has never missed asking his visitors about "Gram's" welfare.

From his cousin and aunt:

"He never forgot that. He said it over and over again. He said it to Charlotte, to us, and to his brothers."

Futher incidents in the romance of Charlotte Green and Russell Noble will be revealed in the concluding chapter of the boy's life story in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

NEW VITAMIN-D BREAD GIVEN

More than 100 messenger boys will complete today the six-day task of delivering 9503 loaves of the new vitamin-B bread inaugurated by the General Baking Co. to doctors, dentists, nurses and matrons of schools and hospitals in Greater Boston.

A total of 340 towns and villages in an area of 1100 square miles are being covered in the delivery, which extends north as far as Amesbury, west to Framingham, and south to Falmouth and Buzzard's Bay. It was undertaken by the company in advance of the general distribution of the new bread to acquaint the medical and dental profession and other leaders in the local health field with the vitamin-D loaves.

Each boy is drilled on a salute as he hands over the package. And each morning each boy gets a new pair of white gloves.

Gov. Ely is a light eater at luncheon time but eats everything. He passes up coffee at the mid-day meal, preferring milk. His digestion is considered good.

ALLEN FOND OF LOBSTER

Unlike the present incumbent, former Gov. Allen, during his term as chief executive of the State had marked likes and dislikes. For a period of three months during the latter part of his term, his luncheon always consisted of lobster salad, toasted whole wheat bread and water. His stomach finally kicked from lack of change. Then he shifted to a daily mid-day meal of fish chowder, toasted whole wheat bread, apple pie, cheese, and water. He always ate luncheon in his private office, but Gov. Ely makes it a point to go to a nearby hotel.

WHY DEATH RATE IS LOW

One of the chief arguments advanced in the past by those opposed to pulling down the State Prison in Charlestown has been that its death rate shows it to be one of the healthiest spots in the United States. Now comes Dr. A. Warren Stearns, commissioner of correction, to refute those assertions. He feels sure that the low death rate there is because of the fact that prisoners about to die are transferred to hospitals and health camps prior to their deaths.

ISRAEL RUBY VERSATILE

In addition to being a lawyer, orator, politician and humorist, City Councillor Israel Ruby of Ward 14, Dorchester, is also a basketball referee. Tomorrow night he will preside at a game between the Fern Marquette and the Philadelphia Colored Giants in the gymnasium of South Boston high school.

GUNMEN SEEK VET'S LOAN

Joseph Johnson, gassed and shell-shocked war veteran of Lynn, is under police protection today while a search is under way for a pair of gunmen who invaded the shack on the outskirts of the city where the veteran lives and demanded his $500 bonus loan under a threat of death.

Johnson, who is 55, told police that the gunmen have been "haunting" his shack for two days, awaiting the arrival of the bonus money.

The shack is little better than a hen house. In fact, Johnson, who was too ill to care, actually was sharing it with a flock of hens who flew all about the place.

Berlin Kills Time Playing New Game of 'Chicago Gangs'

Chicago, March 13 (AP)—They're playing "Chicago gangs" in Berlin.

But it's perfectly harmless, being some sort of new card game that the folks in the German capital have taken up to pass the time away.

Heinz W. Wromsky, a traffic chief for a system of German airways, gave out the information to Chicago on a visit yesterday.

"We take it as a joke," he said. "We talk about Chicago's gunmen a great deal, but we always laugh. We know your reputation must be exaggerated."

Clear, Cool Week-End Bound to Boston

GIRLS EAGER TO WED BUSHMAN

Chicago, March 13 (INS)—Francis X. Bushman today found himself termed a gigolo champion and champion gigolo—with letters pouring in on him.

Some of his feminine correspondents, eager to purchase as husband the one-time "king of romance," enclosed their photographs; none, however, enclosed the requisite proof of wealth which he requires before selling himself in marriage.

Many of the letters denounced him wrathfully, but these he disregarded.

"Life's a gamble," said Bushman. "I subscribe to no creed or philosophy save that of Omar Khayyam—the belief that we should live to its fullest.

"What is so dreadful about offering myself for sale? It is any worse than the position of the vapid society youth who marries the daughter of wealthy parents and lets father-in-law support him, all as long as daughter is content?

"The gigolo merely does on a small scale what the hothouse lover of society does on a big one. Its almost petty larceny compared to grand—and I never stood for pettiness."

For Greater Safety on Every Highway

ALL FORD CARS ARE EQUIPPED WITH SHATTER-PROOF GLASS WINDSHIELDS

FOR greater safety in driving, every Ford car is equipped with a Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield. By reducing the dangers of flying glass it has saved many lives and prevented countless injuries in automobile accidents.

The value of this important safety factor has been known for years, but its use has been limited by expense. It is brought to you on the Ford as standard equipment only because of the efficiency and economy of Ford methods. Much pioneering work has been done in finding ways to manufacture in large volume at low cost.

It is interesting to know how the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield of the Ford is made and why it gives so much extra protection. The process of manufacture requires many separate operations, yet it can be explained in a few simple words.

Two pieces of plate glass, carefully ground and polished, are covered on one side with a thin coating of gelatine. This coating is baked hard, sprayed with liquid celluloid, and treated with a solvent.

Then, between the two pieces of glass, like the middle of a sandwich, is inserted a layer of special celluloid. This also has been treated with a solvent.

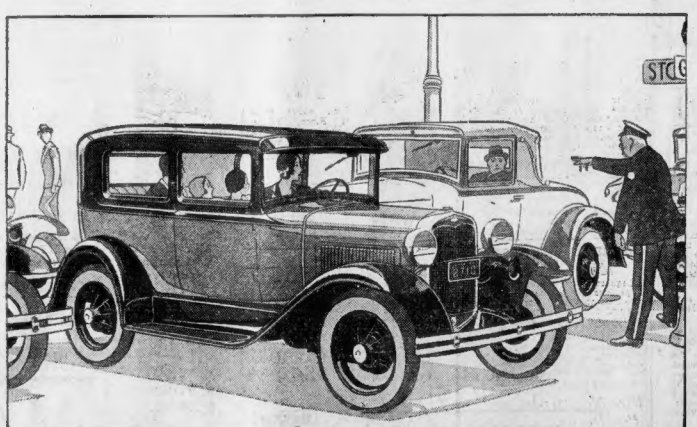
When heat and pressure are applied to the glass sandwich, this solvent helps to dissolve the surfaces in contact and they are actually fused together. It is almost like a welding process. The result is a single sheet of beautiful, clear, laminated glass. The final operation is sealing the edges as protection against air and moisture.

This laminated windshield will withstand a 50% harder impact before breaking than plate glass of equal thickness, and is more flexible under impact. When struck an unusually hard blow, it will crack, but the danger from flying glass is minimized because the pieces adhere to the layer of celluloid.

The greatest care is taken to insure uniform high quality. Plate glass is used for clear vision. One sheet in 150 is taken for test. For the impact test, a heavy steel ball is dropped sixteen feet to the center of a large sheet.

Other samples are subjected to ultra-violet rays and infra-red rays which give, in a few hours, an exposure equal to several years of normal driving. This is done to check the effect of the sun's rays and heat on the crystal clearness of the glass in actual use.

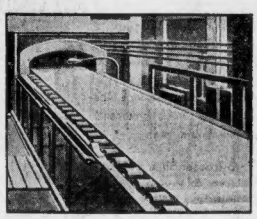
Many improvements have been made in the past three years so that today, Triplex shatter-proof glass is recognized as one of the greatest contributions to safety since four-wheel brakes. High speed and crowded traffic emphasize the need of the protection it affords. It is just another instance of the extra value in the Ford.



The Ford Tudor Sedan is an unusual value at $490

TWELVE OTHER BODY TYPES FROM $430 TO $630

All Ford prices are F. O. B. Detroit, plus freight and delivery. Bumpers and spare tire extra at small cost. You can purchase a Ford on economical terms through the Authorized Ford Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.

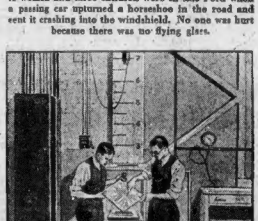


Thirteen Million Square Feet of Glass

The Ford Motor Company was the pioneer in making glass by a continuous machine process. Its manufacturing economies and unusual facilities make it possible to give you Triplex shatter-proof glass in the Ford without extra cost. The Rouge plant alone has a capacity of 13,000,000 square feet of glass annually. This calls for 27,300,000 pounds of silica sand, 8,580,000 pounds of soda ash, 7,930,000 pounds of limestone, 1,820,000 pounds of salt cake, 6,136,000 pounds of cullet, 78,000 pounds of charcoal, and 156,000 pounds of arsenic. For grinding and polishing, the machines use 118,440,000 pounds of sand, 7,873,000 pounds of stucco, 2,715,000 pounds of garnet, and 724,000 pounds of rouge.

No Flying Glass Here

A woman and three children were in this Ford when a passing car upturned a horseshoe in the road and sent it crashing into the windshield. No one was hurt because there was no flying glass.



The Impact Test

A heavy steel ball is dropped sixteen feet on the glass used for the Ford windshield as an impact test. Even under this severe blow there is no flying glass.

VATICAN VIEW ON CANTERBURY

Vatican City, March 13 (AP)—It was said unofficially today that the Vatican would not oppose the archbishop of Canterbury's intended visit to the Holy Land if he made the visit privately as one of the many pilgrims of every Christian faith who go to the Holy Land at Easter or other seasons.

It was repeated, however, that an official visit by the archbishop would create a difficult situation, since it might establish a precedent which would permit its repetition indefinitely.

The archbishop planned to be the guest of J. P. Morgan, on whose yacht he is cruising in the Mediterranean, at a visit to the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem which is guarded by the Catholic, Greek, Armenian and Copt religions. The Holy See had made representations to the British Government suggesting difficulties which might arise from such a visit.

Wales to Open Big Argentine Exhibit

Buenos Aires, Argentina, March 13 (AP)—The Prince of Wales will throw open here tomorrow the greatest British trade show ever held outside the empire, climaxing Great Britain's effort to recapture first place in Argentina's foreign trade.

The finishing touches were put today to the exhibition in preparation for inaugural. For the exhibition $20,000,000 worth of British-made goods have been assembled.

NANCY BOWEN IS RELEASED

Buffalo, March 13 (AP)—Nancy Bowen, 65-year-old Seneca Indian woman, today was sentenced to imprisonment for one to ten years for manslaughter, first degree, but was released immediately since she had already served the minimum time of her sentence. Her sentence grew out of this laying of Mrs. Clotilde Marchand, wife of Henri Marchand.

Nancy, who said she killed Mrs. Marchand because she considered the woman a "white witch," pleaded guilty Tuesday to the manslaughter charge.

Judge Thorn preceded his sentence by sharp condemnation of Henri Marchand, who, he declared, had "t large share morally in the murder of his wife because of his affair with Lila Jimerson."

He said Lila's acquittal was a "miscarriage of justice and ridiculous."

DETAILED STUDY OF COACH AID TO BUILDERS

As every member of the Boston Evening American chapter of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild has heard, "Nothing succeeds like success."

A large factor in the successful completion of any undertaking is careful planning and analysis. Guild members who have not already done so should make a detailed study of the whole problem of building their coach. Time should receive first consideration. Plan or arrange some schedule of your time so that you can be reasonably sure to be finished with your coach somewhat before the closing date of the Guild's great $50,000 competition.

Do not wait too long to get the materials you will need. Such items as small bolts, small screws, paint, glass for windows, leather, braid, fringe and beads should be secured before they are actually needed so that these items are at hand when required. In some instances it may be necessary to send out of town for parts. This takes time and is apt to cause delays.

Above all, do not allow yourself to be swerved from the determination to finish your model. Show your parents, your teacher and your friends that you have the courage and ability to finish the job.

LESSON NO. 18

About the time of Napoleon, someone devised a step compartment idea, whereby the coach steps, after being folded, slid underneath the carriage out of the way. Previous to this invention, the steps folded against the inside of the door, thus being a source of annoyance to the occupants as they occupied considerable foot room.

On our coach model there are two of these folding steps, one on each side, directly underneath the doors. The steps are housed in the compartment which is screwed to the underside of coach body. The center lid acts as a cover and conceals the compartment from view.

135. The two steps of cross bars can be made of most any wood. Work a piece of stock to size ¾ in. x ¾ in. x 12 in. The length of each cross bar is best obtained by measuring distance on your coach between body hangers. The sketch (Illustration No. 20) contained in today's lesson, will give you a clear idea of the shape and position of these pieces.

134. For the step and step guide pieces, some 1-16 in. thick metal is used. The guide pieces are bent at right angles and screwed in place on inside surfaces of cross bars. At the ends of the guide pieces, a stop lug is soldered, or they may be cut out of the guide stock itself. These lugs act as stops and prevent the steps from being pulled out of compartment.

133. The steps are not difficult to make. The dimensions given on the Guild drawings and on sketch of illustration No. 20 will make it easy for you to construct this feature of the coach. The steps are held in proper positions by angle and cross cleats. Notice where these items are located on the drawings.

136. Underneath at the back of top step, two small lugs are soldered in place to strike against the lugs of guide pieces when steps are pulled out. The exact location of these lugs is best obtained by holding step in place in compartment and marking location of guide pieces which will allow steps to fold properly outside of floor board.

137. A cover of tin or other thin metal is fastened to the cross bars. Two sway strap loops made out of 1-16 in. wire are soldered in place as indicated in sketch. The sway straps are fastened from these lugs to loops on the coach.

Raymond Barbeau, West Lynn.

QUESTION

"What kind of cloth is used to upholster the body? The Guild drawings say, "white velvet silk." Does this mean silk velvet, satin or silk?"

ANSWER

QUESTION

"On the Guild drawings, the one that shows how to upholster the inside of body, see over the door hinges a drawing that shows the front and rear shackle brace. Could you tell me where these shackle braces are used and their purpose?"

ANSWER

The shackle braces or straps are the means of fastening the body to the springs. In other words, the coach is suspended from the springs and body hangers by means of the shackle brace or strap. These straps are made of leather.

Pope Won't Broadcast

Vatican City, March 13 (AP)—It was semi-officially understood today that Pope Pius XI does not plan to broadcast an Easter message to the world by radio. It had been reported he might speak again by radio on Holy Saturday, April 4.

SLIDE BURIES 2 VILLAGES IN FRANCE

Chambery, France, March 13 (AP)—Government engineers today attempted to divert an enormous landslide, due to heavy rains, bearing down upon the picturesque villages of Le Chatelard at the rate of 500 feet an hour after having engulfed Berges and Michaud yesterday.

The engineers evacuated the 125 inhabitants of Le Chatelard. There were no casualties in either Berges or Michaud.

The residents of the hillside, warned of the approaching slide, drove off their cattle and pets and left their homes. Twelve houses comprising the hamlet of Michaud were buried under the moving mass. Giant walnut trees, for which the region was famous, toppled over and were buried along with barns and dwellings.

Engineers believed they would be able to divert the movement to a mountain torrent, the bed of which probably will absorb some of the moving matter.

GANGSTERS ARE AIDED BY RING

Montreal, March 13 (AP)—An alleged fake naturalization conspiracy by which alien gangsters in the United States circumvented deportation was under investigation today by the department of justice at Ottawa.

Albert Chabot, clerk of naturalisation, said George C. Craft, an official of the National Association of Credit Men, had uncovered the ring, centering here and spreading throughout the Dominion. He estimated the conspiracy involved $3,000,000 in fraud.

The conspiracy he said, works in this manner: Spurious Canadian citizenship papers are drafted and sold to criminals in large American cities. United States authorities move to deport them to European countries. They exhibit "proof" that they are Canadians and are shipped across the border. Eventually they return by way of Detroit, Minneapolis, Seattle and other border cities.

TERRIFIC BLAST ROCKS TULSA

Tulsa, Okla., March 13 (AP)—Tulsa and its environs were shaken early today by the explosion of 400 quarts of nitroglycerine stored in a magazine two miles west of Red Fork, near Tulsa.

Scores of windows were broken and thousands of persons were alarmed by the shock.

Officials said a grass fire might have been responsible.

A hole 30 feet in diameter and more than six feet deep was blasted from the earth. Trees near the scene were torn into ribbons. Small bits of the steel house which covered the explosive were found miles distant.

Fire Captain Hurt at Everett Blaze

Fire Capt. Obed W. DeChamp of Everett received a laceration of the hand in fighting a fire at 144 Springdale ave. early today.

Famous Planet X, 'Ninth World,' Has 1st Anniversary

Flagstaff, Ariz., March 13 (AP)—Today is Pluto's birthday, the first anniversary of the discovery of the "Planet X," the ninth world and the only one which is Mother Earth's twin in size.

The birthday marks the finish of the big scientific row which this shy, far-distant brother stirred up. For months some astronomers called him a comet, or at least a "planetary object," a sort of half-wit planet.

1500 ARRESTED IN ONE RAID

Hamburg, Germany, March 13 (AP)—Fifteen hundred persons were arrested last night in what was probably the largest political raid ever staged in Germany. Of the 1500, about 1200 will be prosecuted for disturbing the peace.

Police learned that Communists had forged a considerable number of tickets for a meeting of Fascists. They waited until about 4000 persons had filled the meeting hall and then closed the doors and proceeded with a two-hour examination of the entry cards to detect the disturbers.

After the meeting had been purged of reds, the Fascist brown shirts posted a heavy guard and th. Fascist Minister of Interior of Brunswick, Anton Fransen, spoke undisturbed.

JAPANESE PRINCESS IS CHRISTENED

Tokio, March 13 (AP)—Japan's tiniest bit of royalty was christened Yori Atsuko today on the seventh day after the princess' birth. Shortly thereafter, in strict accordance with time-honored rites, Emperor Hirohito had duly reported the name to the spirits of the imperial ancestors.

The name was chosen from the ancient Japanese scriptures. Yori meaning obedience to heaven and Atsuko meaning generosity to those on earth.

Princess Yori is the fourth daughter born to Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako. The Emperor is yet without a direct male heir to succeed him on the throne of "the line unbroken for ages eternal."

Early this morning the infant was given a ceremonial bath in a newly-wrought tub of hinoki (cypress) wood. Several ladies of the court were in attendance. In a special chamber adjoining the bathroom two historians read in stentorian tones a passage from the Nihon Shoki, the ancient history of the imperial house.

Simultaneously four high nobles, then, garbed in the attire of the ancient court, twanged bowstrings, an archaic rite intended to drive all evil influences out of the life of the imperial infant.

Then come the ceremonies before the three shrines in the imperial household, personally attended by the emperor, whereby the name of the infant was conveyed to the gods and imperial ancestors.

Annual Ball of Pudding Club

Numerous Dinners to Precede Costume Dance Tonight in Cambridge

THE SMARTEST AFFAIR of the week takes place this evening in Cambridge at the Hasty Pudding Club. It is the annual costume ball and the debutantes have been anticipating this event for weeks. There will be hundreds of dinners preceding the dance, among them a very swanky one at the Ritz-Carlton in the French Room, with Jack Blanchard and Dudley Brown in charge of arrangements.

A GAY YOUNG CROWD will attend in costume, among them Sarah Palfrey and Malcolm Bancroft, Frances Williams and George Jackson, Barbara Wendell and Robert McKesson, Linda Collens and Richard Neff, Barbara Richardson and Joseph Bradley, Barbara Hodges and Thomas Dunstan, Louise Sawyer and Theodore Stedman, Anne Warren and James Parker, Margo Stanwood and Karl Adams, Martha Means and Edward Orlandini, Priscilla Prince and Walter Channing, Rosamond Holton and Edmund Mays, Barbara Young and Frederick Dearborn, Mary Matteson and Dudley Brown, Margaret Ford and Alfred Bell, Winifred Long and Jack Blanchard, Frances Gardiner and Jack Appel, Berlia Weeks and Beekman Pool, Eleanor Rowe and Gerard Cassidy, Elizabeth Wells and Alfred Kidder

AUTHOR OF HARVARD PLAY

Dona Jose Maria Castillo, in native costume, is author of the Hasty Pudding Club show, "Bulls and Belles," which will have its first public presentation on April 6 at the clubhouse on Holyoke st., Cambridge.

Rehearsals Start for Hasty Pudding Club's Annual Show

REHEARSALS FOR THE 85th annual Hasty Pudding Club show under the guidance of John Boyle, well known theatrical producer and dancing partner of the late Jack Donohue, are now being held daily at the clubhouse on Holyoke st. The gloomy milieu of an underground "social organization" that is being forced out of business by the House Plan, in vivid contrast with gay scenes from Spanish life, where dons and senoritas plight their troths to the guitar in old Castile, forms the background for the production which bears the significant title, "Bulls and Belles."

THE CURTAIN RISES ON an exclusive club at Harvard forced by financial depression to open its austere doors to a dance given to help fill its dwindling coffers. Our hero, a mild sort of fellow, comes into disagreement with a gentleman "from New Haven" over a lady of Spanish extraction and gets decidedly the worst of the argument. He wakes up in (?) Spain. What happens then to our hero must be seen to be appreciated. Virtue has her way and the course of true love runs smoothly, at least to the end of the play.

LEADING PARTS IN THE cast of 35 will be taken by Edward E. Cole, '32, as the hero, Crispin Cooke, '32, as the heroine and cause of most of the trouble, and Stuart Scott, '33, as the gentleman "from New Haven." M. D. Wheelock '31, will supply the necessary comic relief in the role of hard-boiled valet to the above mentioned gentleman. The authors of the book are J. M. Castillo, '31, F. R. Flynn, '32, and R. G. Luckey, '31. The lyrics were written by Flynn and the music largely by Flynn, Castillo and D. B. Edmonston, '32.

AS AN ADDED ATTRACTION, Castillo, whose full title is Don Jose Maria Castillo de Giron-Aragon-Hohenstaufen (and we hear is related to the royal family of Spain), has contributed several genuine Spanish dances, including a tango and at least one example of the new rumba. Mr Moses Weld-Ware, '32, is once more acting as graduate manager of the production. Undergraduate managers include Paul Swett, Jr., '32, manager; H. S. Warren, '32, ticket manager; Leslie Cheek, '31, stage manager; and A. D Bell, '32, assistant manager. James Barr Ames is in charge of publicity.

Riviera Now at Height

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Cannes, France, March 13—With the Riviera season at its height and so many affairs to attend, the elegance of gowns and beauty of jewels shown by the fashionables at their gatherings are really a bit bewildering.

At dinner at Ciro's, Miss Valerie French, granddaughter of the late Earl of Ypres, wore a chic black chiffon and a short coat of white moire which suited her remarkably fair complexion.

Another prominent member of the Riviera colony is the American hostess, Grace Lady Newborough. She also was at Ciro's in a fine pale blue lace creation with a two-flounced skirt of straight lines and a pearl necklace of several strands

Mrs. Bawyer Hill of San Francisco, who is very tall, was becomingly gowned in pale blue satin with diamants trimmings.

To see the afternoon gowns on the Riviera, one must visit the Salle de Baccarat, between 5 and 8 in the evening. There recently was Lady Cholmondeley, dark, petite and demure, in a very smart alpaca coat and skirt dotted in minute polkadots, and a small cloche hat of turquoise blue felt with a matching crepe-de-chine scarf

Mrs. William Burton, whose country property at St. Antoine is near the Cannes country club at Mougins, was in a brick red coat and skirt with a broad-brimmed straw hat of the type now in great vogue

Another hat which has taken the fancy of milady is the knitted skull cap in every conceivable form, of velvet, silk, wool or chenille. Velvets predominate

Ultra Violet Rays of No Benefit to Plant Life

New York, March 13 (AP)—Sun baths are fine for men and monkeys, but plants can get along without them

The Museum of Science and Industry says the ultra-violet rays in sunshine, beneficial to mankind and animals, have no determinable effect on the plant world. Plants given real sunbath treatment appeared exactly the same as those grown under ordinary greenhouse glass, which cuts off ultra-violet rays

Court Dress for Debs

London, March 13 (US)—The debutante who makes her curtsy before King George and Queen Mary at the forthcoming courts in May and June at Buckingham palace will be clothed unlike debutantes at any post-war presentation.

She will wear a halo headdress worn on the back of her head; long, important-looking skirts, and a short narrow train.

One London court dressmaker has already shown an early collection of presentation gowns, and if they are at all indicative of 1931 styles, simplicity and youth will have been "dressmakered" out of dress.

In Tudor, Plantagenet, Victorian and even Edwardian periods crop up in one court gown, a melange that is confusing to women of simple tastes. At a certain court parade there were:

An opera cape with Plantagenet sleeves

An Elizabethan brocaded silk encrusted with brilliants.

A deep red gown with a bright green brocaded train.

A bright blue satin gown painted in wild rose design.

A vivid green gown cut and embroidered in leaf pattern at the hem, and worn with a tiny "coolie" jacket.

The greens, blues and reds of the dresses are those of the historic clothes in South Kensington Museum and appear strange to modern eyes.

After a long period of trial and error, our Special Social Service Commission (a body composed of men and women who do things and make statements afterward) has succeeded in inventing a pliable rubber club which is annoying when used upon a citizen, but leaves no marks to show in court. Our S. S. S. Commission thinks these will be very handy for police officers to use in subduing disinterested spectators who happen to be in the neighborhood of disorderly gatherings.

Carson City, Nev., March 14 (AP)—The Nevada House has passed a bill authorizing a reward for "dead bank robbers."

The bill providing a reward for dead bank robbers was described as molded after similar Texas legislation. One of two companion measures makes the killing of anyone caught in the act of robbing a bank justifiable homicide.

Hats Follow Trend of Costumes

By ANN ARDEN

NEARLY EVERYONE makes a new straw hat her first spring purchase. Formerly it was a guesswork business for rarely did anyone have a formulated idea as to what her spring outfit was going to be. This season however, there will be little guessing to hat picking machinery is so perfectly designed to type that you will find it easy to forecast your first spring outfit by the hat you choose.

STRAWS ARE decidedly in the fore. They are so versatile in the manner in which they may be handled. There are the straw braids that may be manipulated like felt. There are rough straws and fine, woven ones. All of which goes to make the straw hat a real fashion success. Off crowns and medium brims appear for sports wear in felt or straw.

FOR STREET and most daytime wear the tendency of the hat model is upward. You can first flatter your face in shape and then complement your costume to perfection in Toques turbans in wrapped or halo effects, brimmed and brimmed hats are designed to suit every one. All sorts of materials besides straws are used for these. Novelty braids, wool nets, fine felts, velvets, sev introduce an interesting va riety. Straws are intricately varied and even felts divert from the usual by sponsoring tweedy effects.

THE SMALL hat pictured, perfect to wear with the suit, is in a softly woven silk straw, and also in a smart brown tone. It is cleverly folded and draped in one side, where it is accented with brown ostrich feather tips. A cross fox scarf is worn with this.

TRICORNES have to be worn with dash. They are vogue, but they are sophisticated hats. If you are the type that can wear a veil with spirit, throw your tricorne with one. The veil does many intriguing things. It may just cover the eyes, come down to the nose or come short in front, sweeping longer in the nape of the neck and side. It may also be worn draped up off the hat in front and down to the back in back. They are great fun to wear, and they can be tremendously chic.

10 SCHOOLS ARE FIRE TRAPS

Brockton March 13—Ten a major portion of the high school were declared to be nothing better than fire traps in the report of three engineers of the National Board of Fire Underwriters called in to make a survey of safety conditions of the 23 remaining buildings in the city system, four are recommended to be razed at once. Of the other 19 three are undesirable features in exit arrangements and during of details.

The 10 are the oldest section of Hugh Worthington Hunkinson Howard Spring, Edgar Field, Elm Street, Winnard, Perkins and both. The four boys in the city are the newest section of the high, Russell St. Patrick's parochial and the George H. Pyne.

In white. Pearls, ivories, crystals. Effective accents with navy and black costumes. In jade. Real jade . . simulated jade. Decorative spots on brown or black ensembles.

In coral. Real corals . . coral color. A welcome touch on a black, blue, beige or white combination. In turquoise. So lovely with brown or gray or navy.

Many of fashion's necklaces are two colors . . or three. As many of fashion's costumes are.

Many necklaces are shorter . . . the better with dresses' higher necklines.

More bracelets this Spring . . . with fashion's shorter sleeves. More clips this Spring with fashion's little hats.

These Are Fashion's Accessories

The top figure wears a two-strand choker of coral and jade with pendant ornament. At her right, an ivory choker and bracelets . . . smart with navy blue costumes. At her left, a double strand necklace of pearls with side clasp, and an earring to match.

The next figure puts a jade clip in her hat and a jade pin in her dress . . . And the next wears a four-strand choker of flat rondels . . . and there's a bracelet to match.

Below are the four fashionable glove lengths. And down the side fashion's handbags . . . a frameless bag with zipper closing and monogram . . . a pouch with decorative lock . . . a flat envelope with colored ring . . . a smart pouch shape . . . an envelope with contrasting leather trim . . . and the convenient tophandle bag.

Handbag Highlights

Fashionable handbags are part of an ensemble . . . of a costume complete and harmonious in every detail. Matching the coat or coat trimming. With decorations that harmonize with an accent in the costume.

More elegance in bags this Spring. With finer leathers . . . pinseal and morocco . . . fashionable again. With finer looking clasps and ornaments.

More decorative bags this Spring. But quiet and restrained decorations. Nothing loud . . . nothing wild. Ladylike—as fashion is lady-like . . . and elegant.

Glove Highlights

Fashion's gloves are longer, because fashion's sleeves are shorter. Worn to wrinkle . . . carelessly around the wrist.

* * *

Six-button gloves. With full-length sleeves. Eight-button gloves With three-quarter sleeves. Twelve-button gloves. With elbow sleeve and shorter.

Beige gloves are in fashion. With navy, black and brown costumes. Brown gloves are fashionable. A darker accent on the beige costume.

POSTHUMOUS AWARD TO DECEASED ALLSTON SAILOR

WIDOW GETS HERO AWARD

In 1925 the U. S. S. Denver, patrolling Central American waters as a peacemaker in the Nicaraguan election riots, sent ashore a landing party to dislodge a rebel reserve. In the bitter fighting for possession of the town, Elliott Franklin Winsloe, of Dorchester, a boy of 17, distinguished himself repeatedly by his gallantry, and was wounded in the knee.

His enlistment expired, Winsloe returned to Dorchester and went to work as a railroad fireman.

Yesterday he was awarded the Third Nicaraguan Campaign Medal "for conspicuous gallantry in action," citing the valor of his conduct in the fight with the insurgents.

HOOVERS WILL TOUR PARKS

Washington, March 13 (US)—President and Mrs. Hoover plan a long vacation trip this summer which will take them to the Pacific Coast after a tour of the national parks.

For the President, it will be both a vacation and a political journey. He intends to make several speeches and also to stop off at various points to indulge his favorite pastime of casting for trout. He has numerous invitations to be the guest of fishing clubs and has tentatively accepted several of them.

The President's trip will begin the latter part of June. He has definitely fixed the date of June 16 to be in Marion, Ohio, to dedicate the tomb of the late President Warren G. Harding. At about the same time he has agreed to go to Springfield, Ill., to attend ceremonies dedicating the last resting place of Abraham Lincoln.

London Rushes Plan for Transit Merger

London, March 13 (AP)—The ministry of transport is bringing to a head plans for £130,000,000 ($650,000,000) merger absorbing London tubes, tramways, bus and other transport services into one large publicly owned undertaking.

The ministry today issued the text of a bill creating a London transport board which will issue its own stock in exchange for existing privately owned stock of the separate corporations so absorbed.

Dedham Patrolman Made a Sergeant

Dedham, March 13—Patrolman John Cahill, for the past eight years a member of the Dedham police department, was today notified of his appointment last night by the Dedham board of selectmen as sergeant.

which has responded to a rationalization program, partly inspired by President Hoover and Secretary of Commerce Lamont.

Having moved within the law to put production under control, the industry, which in 1924 was the first to recover, has of late been selling its full production, and, on the social side, has gone far toward eliminating child labor, night work for women and inordinately long work days.

The worst sore spot with which the Administration is concerned at present is the oil industry, which is suffering, not from diminished consumption, but from excessive productive capacity, resulting from the bringing in of three great fields, of which the Texas field is the last and most disturbing.

Industry to Blame

President Hoover feels the oil industry itself is partly to blame for conditions because of slowness to apply remedies proposed several years ago. In addition to intrastate proration, the Chief Executive holds the opinion that an interstate compact, regulating production, is necessary. Such an agreement would not be leval under the existing anti-trust laws without ratification by Congress.

President Hoover believes the recovery which took place in domestic business last spring would have carried through, except for disastrous subsequent turns in outside world business, as measured by the collapse of silver, the secondary weakness in commodities, and the revolution in nine countries. He now sees signs of economic recuperation at home as well as abroad.

Data flowing to the White House indicates that, for several months, there has been a cessation of the decline in general business. Visitors find President Hoover especially pleased with an increase in employment last month, the first gain in more than a year. The President thinks also that the country is at the threshold of the time when seasonal factors would open up outdoor work and alleviate the general unemployment situation.

Confident of Future

Despite reluctance to make predictions, the Chief Executive continues confident of the future.

The President does not lay any special political significance to the Progressive conference, now in session in Washington, but regards it as an attempt to exploit such discontent as is inevitable in time of depression.

President Hoover's intervention into the business situation in behalf of stabilization, it is argued, has resulted in going through intense depression with an absence of social disturbances. The Administration ascribes this social tranquility to President Hoover's efforts to maintain wage rates, to organized relief for the unemployed and to the Farm Board's costly experiment, which, at least, has enabled somewhat more orderly agricultural liquidation than might otherwise have been possible.

President Hoover, regarding this as the first purely industrial depression, thinks permanent business stabilization measures will have to be founded on a better diagnosis of the causes of the economic breakdown. Then, he believes, it will be feasible to enter future business cycles better prepared.

Differ With Raskob

He feels co-ordination within industries is vital and that the Government can play a useful part in encouraging efforts to consider conditions as a whole, rather than only narrow competitive matters. However, he does not agree with John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, that this entails dismantling the Sherman Anti-Trust Law.

Incidentally, the inquiry into banking under the Democratic auspices of Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, is not necessarily to be construed as out of accord with the White House viewpoint. The President takes the view that the whole banking and credit situation needs to be re-examined, in view of the failure of Federal Reserve rate advances to prevent the earlier stock market boom from creating a dangerous situation.

Moreover, the Chief Executive is not adverse to opening up the question of changing eligibility rules under which member banks may look to the Federal Reserve system for help in times of widespread public nervousness, such as prevailed late last autumn. The President believes the rush of the banks to unload and become liquid projected unemployment for a million persons.

Inhalator Fails to Save Woman's Life

Mattapan police and firemen worked two hours today in a vain effort to resuscitate Mrs. Annie Wylie, 75, of 14 Hunter st., a victim of gas poisoning. Dr. William Johnson, 210 Norfolk st., pronounced the aged woman dead after she failed to respond to treatment with an inhalator.

Mrs. Lillian M. Regan, Mrs. Wylie's daughter, found her mother on the floor and told police she believed the jet was opened accidentally.

Man's Body Found in River at Lawrence

Lawrence, March 13—The body of an unidentified man which apparently had been in the water a long time, was found today at the foot of the falls in the Merrimack river here.

Police officers crossing the bridge saw the body on the rocks close to the wall of the Newton side. According to the undertaker who took charge of the remains, pending an autopsy by Medical Examiner Dr. Victor A. Reed, there were no marks of identification.

DENISON 'FAIRY STORY' FLAYED

Washington, March 13 (INS)—Terming the explanation of former Representative Edward D Denison of Illinois as to the presence in his office of a trunk of liquors as a "fairy story," Asst. Dist. Atty. Sirica today opened the Government's argument for Denison's conviction in District Supreme Court here on a charge of illegal possession of liquor.

"I say to you," he told the jury, "you've got a fairy story here in Congressman Denison's story of dishes."

Denison claimed the trunk he ordered shipped to Washington contained dishes bought in Panama for a friend, and declared the liquor-laden trunk which was delivered to his office was not his and was sent here through a baggage mixup in New York city.

Sirica pointed to the "undenied facts in the case," and called for judgment of Denison, "just as if he were an ordinary citizen and not a former congressman."

"The only issue here," Sirica continued, "is whether Denison knowingly possessed liquor. We cannot judge this case by what Denison says. We can only judge it by the circumstances of the case."

Ford Is Chef, Mrs. Edison Is Maid at Party

Mrs. Thomas A. Edison attended, dressed as a maid.

A buffet-style supper was served in a private dining room at an inn, which was called "the help's dining room." The guests ate at improvised tables made of boxes.

The menu included onion soup, thick broiled steak on toast, buckwheat cakes with brown sugar and nutmeg, blueberry pie and stick candy.

Stalin, Soviet Head, But Pay Runs Low

New York, March 13 (AP)—Boris Pilnyak, Russian novelist, estimates he earns about 20 times more than Joseph Stalin. Pilnyak arrived here yesterday and established himself in a strictly capitalistic suite at the St. Moritz.

Not a member of the Communist party, he said, his income is unrestricted and subject only to income tax. On the other hand, Stalin is confined to a nominal salary by the creed of the party.

SUNDAY SHOWS HIT BY PRELATE

Baltimore, Md., March 13 (AP)—Archbishop Michael J. Curley today entered the battle over the State's ancient Sunday closing laws, in progress in the legislature for weeks, with a statement of opposition to Sunday motion pictures.

"The average moving pictures presented to our American audiences" the Catholic prelate said in a statement, "Are so full of salaciousness and so destructive of moral standards, that they should not be shown to decent people on any day."

A bill giving local option to Baltimore and the 23 counties on the enforcement of the so-called blue laws passed the House of Delegates this week and is in the hands of a Senate committee.

WARRANT DENIED IN VAIN HUNT FOR FUGITIVE BRIDE

Hank Put on Spot; Scorpio Held

By FRANCES MARION

CHAPTER 20

VOICES OUTSIDE attracted Hank.

In the office were Carl and Anne.

Quickly the girl drew Hank aside.

"Listen, Hank," she whispered. "They're after you. I heard them threaten you, after you left. I followed you here with Carl—to warn you. You must go away—quickly—before they kill you.

"Don't worry, Anne. I'm not afraid. He's too much of a coward."

"But not the men who work for him. They'd do anything."

"No—these rats are afraid of anyone in the newspaper game."

"Hank—for my sake—Oh, I know what you think—but I've always cared for you—I always will—"

There was a tense emotional moment. Hank squeezed the girl's hand.

"You were silly to come here," he murmured. "Now you wait right here in the office, and by and by Carl and I will take you home."

He whispered to the sergeant, who handed him a key. "Be back in a minute, Carl," he remarked.

Hank hurried down the hall and silently opened the door of the new dark ballistics room. Quickly he seized the telephone and called a number.

"Simms?" he inquired. "There's a new ballistics room. Better come right down—I have a big job for you. I'll wait."

The door opened. He looked into the grinning face of Carl.

"Ain't a pal—had even sent poor old Aunt Emma to heaven to save you tonight," chuckled Carl.

Hank nodded.

"You can think faster than any human being I ever saw," he rejoined.

Carl turned serious.

"But what were you doing up there? And what are you doing in here?"

"That's my business. You'll know in a couple of days." Hank paused to regard his friend sharply. Then he smiled.

"But what's your game? I know now that they couldn't bribe a square shooter like you."

"Oh you'll know before long. But go on—come through, what's your game? You were up to something last night, and tonight you took one of the largest chances I ever saw—for something."

Hank grinned.

"Don't take a chance with Scorpio," he chuckled. "We looked him tonight—but he's too smart to fool often."

Hank planned

Others also.

For from the window of the ballistics room, Scorpio and his two killers were watching and listening.

"I won't be playing Aunt Emma's accompaniments on a harp for a long time yet, Carl," Hank insisted. "Now I want you to go back and meet Anne. Take her home. I want to meet a man here for a minute and tomorrow maybe I can explain this whole thing. Please."

Carl nodded and left.

Hank turned to the table, on which ranged the ballistics experts' instruments. Switching on the desk lights, he adjusted the apparatus and inserted the bullets from the expert's cabinet.

Scorpio and his men watched curiously.

"What kind of foolishness is this?" Scorpio whispered. Gardenia did not answer. He was watching the reporter like a hawk.

Hank set the microscope, peered through them, focused them.

Scorpio's face contorted with horrible hate.

Now he knew the reporter's racket.

Quickly he reached to the pocket of Gardenia, and withdrew the man's revolver.

Slowly he raised it and fired.

Hank's army buddies and newspaper pals were binding him fast—well.

Pale, her eyes tragic but tearless, Anne sat immobile as an army chaplain intoned a prayer.

Eleanor Maguire is leading lady in "Rose of County Kerry," a play which will be presented March 16 and 17 in Bedford school auditorium by the Bedford A. C.

MOTHER SHOWS PRISON TO DAUGHTER

Visit to the National Woman's Party Conference Recalls the Days of Suffrage Campaign

Elsie Hill, militant suffragette whose campaign for the enfranchisement of women earned her a week's stay in the Charles st. jail in 1919, returned to Boston today as a delegate to the National Woman's Party Conference in session at the Copley-Plaza hotel.

With Miss Hill—who retains her maiden name, although married in 1922 to Prof Albert Levitt of the University of North Dakota—was her 6-year-old daughter, Elsie Hill Levitt.

Today they visited Sheriff John A. Keliher at the Charles Street Jail, where Miss Hill showed her daughter the cell in which she was held for speaking without a license on Boston Common.

Miss Hill complimented the sheriff, who was her jailor in 1919, on the improvement in sanitary conditions in the jail since her incarceration.

SERGEANTS ON 2-YEAR LIST

Police sergeants who passed examinations for promotion to lieutenancies, were notified today their names will be placed on the new eligible list of the civil service for two years.

Announcement of the new list caused dissatisfaction among those who took the examination and those who did not, but who were on the old list.

When Commissioner Hultman, June 27, last, announced examinations for promotions above the grade of sergeant yearly, he failed to include the "sandwich system" under which men on the old list which expires May 16, may take the new examination or hold their old markings, their names being sandwiched in the new list according to their old dor new mark.

Benjamin Wall headed the old list, Peter Norton was second and Joseph Snow sixth.

Wall and Norton took the new examination, but Snow did not. Now Snow heads the new list, until May 16, when his name will be dropped. Wall is 39th and Norton failed to qualify.

HEARING DATE SET FOR REDS

Edith Berkman, "Red Flame" of the Lawrence strike; Patrcik Devins and William T. Murdock, whom the government seeks to deport as "Reds," will be granted a hearing at East Boston Immigration station Tuesday, it was announced today.

The three leaders of the National Textile Workers' Union were arrested in Lawrence on deportation warrants as undesirable aliens who were attempting to overthrow the government.

Facts brought out at the coming hearing will determine whether or not deportation proceedings will be started.

Miss Berkman and Devins were bailed in $5000 each by the International Labor Defense, but Murdock is still held at the immigration station following treatment at the Marine Hospital, Chelsea, for wounds of the head.

Israel Prager of the International Labor Defense stated bail proceedings were held up pending disposition of Murdock's case in Philadelphia, where he is wanted for inciting to riot.

A sinister find, not directly connected with the prohibition amendment, was found today—Friday the 13th.

Apparently owing to oversight, Friday the 13th has escaped some sort of legislative action. Anything is liable to happen today.

Friday the 13th is generally considered unlucky, unfortunate or what not—but it's all in how you look at it.

The missing Wickersham report might be found. Traffic cops might be stricken dumb. All spelunkies might close. Twins might be born. All of these things may be lucky or unlucky—it depends on your point of view.

Take the latter. Or, rather, take Henry Le Sage family of 43 Highland ave., Everett.

Two years ago today, but it wasn't Friday, Richard and Robert were welcomed to the Le Sage household. A large order for one day.

But, Lo! On January 13, this year, the generous stork left Pauline and Paul. That's luck, and the reader may do self-qualifying as to good or bad.

It's a splendid day to pay income taxes, the collector says. It may even determine your luck a few days from now when the bell sounds.

Moves have been made in the past to purge Friday the 13th of its bad luck stigma, but the jinx inclined refuse to waver.

There's the horror of any 13th floor today; the time-worn ladders and broken mirrors; the black cats, and any number of "fatal" acts. Something ought to be done about Friday the Thirteenth.

INNES BACKS DELEGATE BILL

For the first time during the present legislative session Charles H. Innes, Republican leader, appeared at the State House today and spoke at a hearing in behalf of proposed legislation.

He favored the bill introduced by Senator James G. Moran, chairman of the joint committee on elections relative to the election of delegates to the national convention of political parties.

INNES BACKS BILL

The names of former President Calvin Coolidge and President Herbert Hoover were mentioned during the course of the hearing by various speakers.

"This proposed legislation," said Mr. Innes, "is a very much needed reform. It is a step in the right direction and will enable anyone who wishes to run as a delegate to a national convention to do so.

"I am a machine man; I am a party man, but I believe that a man within a party organization should be permitted to run if he wishes.

SITUATION "UNFAIR"

"The bill which created the present law was introduced by some of Mr Coolidge's friends I don't know whether he approved it or not. This act would have been repealed a long time ago except for the feeling that the impression might get abroad that it was passed solely in Coolidge's behalf.

"While Mr. Hoover, through agreement, did not exercise his right during the last election to name all the delegates from Massachusetts to the national convention, or appoint an agent to do so, he might have done so.

"If Mr. Hover planned to take advantage of this law when he runs for President again it might cause trouble, as Iran't imagine the militant dry not going to him and trying to prevail upon him to spoint dry delegates.

Senator Moran said:

"I filed this bill to care for a situation which is unfair in its essence. When Calvin Coolidge ran for President no one could run for delegate unless he had the indorsement of Mr. Coolidge."

31-2 Pound Sea Clam With Flounder Inside Found in Nahant

A 3½-pound sea clam, with a dead flounder clipped between the lips of its noser, and cower shells, was found on the beach near the Nahant life-saving station today.

It is the largest ever found in the Lynn shore region, according to old-timers, who said it ourdistanced the previous largest one by a full pound.

The finder was Fred Kemp of Willof rd., Nahant, who took it home to exhibit to his friends. It was evidently washed in by the recent flood tide.

PARKER QUITS REGISTRAR JOB

Capt. George A. Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, resigned today to accept trusteeship of the Lotta Crabtree estate.

Frank E. Lyman, commissioner of public works, to whom it was submitted, announced its acceptance and said no appointment would be made before next week. First Deputy Registrar Anthony A. Bonsegni was placed in charge of the department temporarily.

Even before the resignation reached the State House two distinct booms and nearly a score of minor ones were started by friends of prospective candidates for the appointment. Capt. Parker publicly urged the spointment of Bonsegni.

The leading booms were for Capt Charles T. Beaupre, head of the State patrol, and former Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Dorchester.

Capt. Parker was appointed Wednesday to succeed the late Gen Clarence R. Edwards as trustee of the estate of the late Lotta favorite by Judge William M. Prest of Suffolk Probate Court.

elf was formerly in charge of the State patrol, prohibition administrator for the New England district and served as a major during the World War. He is a son of former Atty.-Gen Herbert Parker.

MOTHER SAYS GIRL'S FLIGHT HER FAULT

Grieving Merrimac Bridegroom Appea's in Vain to Police to Search the House

A vain attempt to recover his lost 19-year-old bride through police action was made today by Charles Prescott 1, Merrimac's most disappointed bridegroom.

Prescott in his [illegible] Police Chief Joseph Wren of Salisbury obtain a warrant to search the home of his [illegible] mother in West Newbury.

It is his belief Prescott declared, that his own bride, Miss [illegible] Thayer Prescott 19, who he has not seen since their elopement a week ago, is hidden in her mother's home.

Chief Welch said he could not obtain a warrant, and if he could it might do no good, inasmuch as the girl, conceivably, could be at the house of her own free will.

MOTHER TAKES BLAME.

Meanwhile Elvina's mama, Mrs. Emma Thayer, denied that the bridge was in the mother's home, but refused to state where she is. The mother indicated that the girl might go back to her disgusting bridegroom after the present publicity dies out.

"It's my own fault," the mother said "I drove her to the marriage. I was opposed to it, but if I had kept quiet she probably would not have eloped in spite of me."

Previously the mother had said the girl was in Boston and had no intention of returning to Prescott.

Mrs. Thayer explained that her daughter and Prescott met about a year ago and that there have been several rifts between them since that time.

She said that she told the girl that it would be foolish to marry him if they could not refrain from quarreling before marriage.

Last Thursday she said that Elvina went riding with Prescott, previous to a dance and warned him on the spur of the moment.

BUSBY IN QUANDARY

Mrs Thayer said that her daughter broke down and cried 15 minutes later and that, although she attended the dance with Prescott, she came home immediately after with her brother and declared that she did not want to see her husband again.

Mrs. Thayer said that as long as they were married she had no objections. Everything depends on what Elvina thinks about it.

Prescott said he did not desire to bring legal action unless steps are taken to annul the marriage.

He told Chief Donahue that the girl's family announced their marriage but that when she arrived there they told him the girl was not there and refused to discuss the matter with him.

OFFICERS LAUD RUM ACCUSED

Two officers of the court martial trying four members of the crew of the CG Jouett for selling liquor on board the boat were called today as character witnesses for the defense by counsel for Boatswains Mate Frederick Erskine.

Lt.-Com. Henry Coyle, prosecutor, told the court that while he was commanding officer of the Jouett there was no more efficient or dependable member of his crew than Erskine. Lt. Com. Coyle, one of the three officers who constitute the court martial, also testified favorably of Erskine's character and conduct while under his command.

Erskine was placed on the stand and entered a general denial of the charges.

Three other members of the Jouett's crew, involved with Erskine in the alleged liquor sales, will not be placed on trial for at least two weeks, it was indicated at the Navy Yard today. The destroyer squadron of which the Jouett is a unit leaves Sunday on a ten-day cruise.

The accused men will be held on the prison ship Southey until the squadron's return.

KOTEX keeps you free of self-consciousness at times when sanitary protection is necessary. It is skilfully shaped to fit securely. It absorbs five times more than surgical cotton—absorbs away from the surface, not in one concentrated area. This method of lateral absorption leaves your protection dry and comfortable far longer than the ordinary pad.

It may be worn on either side with equal protection. There is no chance of getting it adjusted wrong—no possibility of embarrassment.

KOTEX has not merely an apparent softness, but a lasting softness. It is treated to deodorize effectively. Hospitals use quantities of Kotex and also the soft absorbent material of which it is made. Kotex is disposable, as you know, quickly, easily—first of all its advantages over old-time methods.

BATTLES A DOG ON GUARD IN HOME

Five Children and the Grandmother Are Saved From Flames and Smoke

Fighting off a crazed police dog State Representative Alexander Sullivan of East Boston entered a burning house at 86 Wadsworth st., by breaking a window, and saved a father, four children and their grandmother from death in the flames early today.

The representative was returning to his home at No. 84, a few doors away, when he saw flames through the window of the home of Leo Lavasseau. Knowing children lived in the house, he tried to enter after sounding the alarm.

ATTACKED BY DOG

He finally smashed the window of the front room and started to climb through. At this point, Rex, a police dog owned by the Lavasseau family, attacked him savagely. All the traditions of canine lore were cast aside as the dog, not only failed to arouse the sleeping family at the outbreak of the fire, but even attempted to halt their would-be rescuer.

Sullivan persisted and rushed upstairs and aroused Lavasseau. He made his way into another bedroom and picked up two of the children Leo, Jr., 12, and Richard, 7.

Carrying them to the street, he returned to rescue Alice, 10, and John, 8. Lavasseau meanwhile groped his way downstairs.

The grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Lavasseau, 65, became lost in the smoke-filled halls after assuring others she could make her own way. Once again Sullivan plunged into the blazing building, this time accompanied by Patrolman John Welch of the East Boston station. The two soon emerged with the aged woman.

SULLIVAN OVERCOME

Sullivan's heroic work caused him to be slightly overcome by smoke. He was treated by Dr. Frederick O'Regan of Saratoga st and was later returned to his home.

Lavasseau, his mother and the four children were taken into the homes of neighbors.

Damage by the flames was estimated at $200. Fire officials admitted that but for the prompt action of Sullivan the family would have been suffocated.

RUSSELL BILL DOOMED

An adverse report is expected today from the Legislative Committee on Cities on the petition of Mayor Richard M. Russell, of Cambridge, providing that a mayor be authorized to appoint without confirmation of the city council a temporary auditor, treasurer, collector of taxes and city collector.

It is understood that the measure will be given leave to withdraw, although two members of the committee, both Representatives, will dissent from the committee report and two other members, both Senators, will reserve their rights.

The bill of Mayor Russell was designed to aid him in his efforts to oust the present Cambridge city treasurer, Jenny F. Lehan. It is generally believed that had the bill been a specific one to apply directly to Cambridge, it would have had a better chance of being reported favorably than the present proposed legislation, which would be State wide in scope.

HERO SOLON MAKES IT A REAL LUCKY DAY FOR THEM

HOT DOG! WHAT A THRILL!

Alice Lavasseur, 10 years old, of 86 Wadsworth st., East Boston, and her pet police dog, Rex, who were rescued when fire swept through their home today. Contrary to canine lore, Rex was asleep when the fire started, failed to alarm the family and then almost balked the rescue of his little mistress by attacking their rescuer. Girl and dog were finally saved and Rex is now the most apologetic pup on earth.

"OH, MISTER, I THANK YOU!"

Little Richard Lavasseur, 7 years old, expressing his gratitude to Representative Alexander Sullivan of East Boston for saving his life during fire in the Lavasseur home. The heroic legislator was forced to battle with the family dog before he could carry young Richard and another Lavasseur child to safety. He later dashed back into the house and rescued two other children in the family. (Staff photo.)

FIRE SCARE AS TRUCK CRASHES

Traffic on Prospect st., Somerville, was tied up for hours, and firemen were called when a truck containing 1000 gallons of gasoline rolled backwards from the railroad bridge, crashed through a fence and hung suspended.

The truck's motor stalled as the vehicle driven by Norman Manley of School st., Everett, mounted the hill near Webster st.

The truck went backward down the hill, swerved over the curb and through a fence into a field, where it stopped with front wheels on the sidewalk.

Police halted all traffic, and firemen under District Chief Wilfred Young stood by with lines of hose ready while workmen removed the gasoline.

Firemen feared that sparks from passing locomotives might ignite gasoline which leaked into the field which slopes down to the railroad tracks.

'BAZAAR' TRIAL MAY SHIFT

San Diego, Cal., March 13 (US)—Dist.-Atty. Thomas Whelan has in his possession today a report that two Los Angeles attorneys representing Alexander Pantages, multi-millionaire showman, assertedly interviewed Justice of the Peace Arthur L. Mundo on the eve of their wealthy client's surrender and arraignment.

Whelan declined to comment on the possibility that he might ask for a change of court when Pantages, along with John P. Mills, wealthy broker, and Jesse Shreve, prominent business man, appear for preliminary examination on April 13 before Justice Mundo.

Investigators Bauch and Leslie T. White are in Los Angeles, where additional ramifications in the "girl Bazaar" case, which so far has resulted in complaints against Pantages, Shreve, Mills, Olive Clark Day and William H. Jobelmann, are to be sifted.

GAS SPOUTS IN TRUCK BANG

Traffic was tied up and firemen with lines of hose made ready to work today when the truck, shown above, containing 1000 gallons of gasoline, backed down a hill and through a fence into a field in Prospect st., Somerville. Gasoline spouted from the top of the tank and spread all around so fast it was feared a serious fire might ensue. (Staff photo.)

DOG BITES TWO IN SOMERVILLE

School had no good influence on a dog in Somerville today for he bit two boys while one boy was petting it and the other trying to put it out of the building.

William J. Totten, 12, of 37 Sydney st., Somerville, a fifth grade pupil in the Glines School, Jacques st., was bitten on the index finger of the right hand.

MEASURES FOR EMERGENCY DISCUSSED

Message From Woods Praises Co-operative Character of Conference

Employment and unemployment problems and their possible solutions were discussed today at a conference on employment stabilization held under auspices of the New England Council at the Hotel Statler.

Attending the conference as representatives of the six New England governors were chairmen and other officers of the state employment committees and representatives of the Metropolitan Providence employment committee in Rhode Island.

At opening of the conference, a telegram was received from Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency committee for employment. It read:

"I am advised of the highly significant conference of the New England group under your auspices. Our committee will be keenly interested in plans considered and judgments reached.

"The co-operative character of the conference and discussion of major industrial and employment problems of six states on common ground will make the accomplishments an important precedent.

"I hope fundamental problems and more permanent needs and programs will receive deserved attention in your discussion since conclusions will aid greatly in thought and action elsewhere."

At the meeting, arranged by President Harry C. Knight of the New England Council, the two major subjects discussed were the emergency measures of unemployment relief and their results, and measures for future stabilization.

A community index of employment, as recommended by the community development committee of the New England Council, was discussed, as were employment and earnings records by individual business concerns, as recommended by the Connecticut emergency committee and industrial committee of the New England Council.

IVOR NOVELLO TO RETURN TO HOLLYWOOD AS M-G-M PLAYER AND AUTHOR

"FRANKENSTEIN" SEQUEL TO "DRACULA" FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, March 13—Ivor Novello, who has been in England for so many months that we had almost forgotten him, arrives in Hollywood May 16. Yes, it's a movie contract, signed, sealed and delivered, making him a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player and author. Novello at one time, bade fair to be the most popular actor on the screen.

He played the male lead in "The White Rose" for D. W. Griffith and his fan mail was enormous made the letters received by Lillian Gish, Carol Dempsey, Richard Barthelmess and all others who had been under the Griffith banner look pathetically meager.

Luella O. Parsons

I remember D. W. telling me about Novello's tremendous popularity. Then Novello went abroad, wrote a play that was a sensation and appeared for months in "The Constant Nymph." Since his preference is for writing, it seems likely that most of Novello's work for M. G. M. will be as a writer.

"Dracula" went over very big. It has been one of Universal's best-paying pictures. That is why Junior Laemmle purchased "Frankenstein," on the same order, a mystery tale. John G. Balderstone, who wrote the adaptation and dialogue for "Dracula," will do the same for "Frankenstein," and according to Junior it is to be one of Universal's most important 1931 pictures.

I ALMOST said in writing about Joel McCrae that he was God's gift to women, then I realized it might be interpreted in a manner. But Joel is so popular with all the girls in Hollywood we must have our joke. He will play opposite Constance Bennett again. At least, tests have been made of him to play the lead in "Common Clay," and as I once said about Miss Bennett, she generally gets what she wants and she has decided Mr. McCrae is to be her leading man.

YOU WOULDN'T think it would be so difficult to cast George Washington. What with the powdered wig and a little makeup most any man of his stature could play the part. Yet Darryl Zanuck had the most difficult time trying to find someone to play George Washington in George Arliss' picture, "Alexander Hamilton." He finally engaged Alan Mowbray. Isn't Mowbray an Englishman? Dear me, dear me, an Englishman to play the Father of Our Country. Anyway Mowbray will play in "God's Gift to Women" and they do say he is one great actor. Well now don't come back and say Washington originally came from English stock. We know it.

A GOOD PICTURE does a lot for an actor but it doesn't do half for an actor what it does for a director. A director can be on the ragged edge just ready to be pushed into oblivion and come through with a good picture and he is not only rescued but given a claim. New York did a rave over "The Last Parade." The reviews were marvelous and moreover the picture is doing a big business. Columbia probably thought Eric Kenton was only a fair director, but after the good word on "The Last Parade" he is being patted on the back and handed "Lover Come Back to Me," a story of modern youth and one of the movies Harry Cohn is banking on.

ALL IS QUIET at First National and Warner Brothers. Terribly quiet' They have purchased a play called "Safe in Hell." Huston Branch is the author and Maude Fulton will adapt it. But the story is so original and has such a good angle that orders have been issued keeping everyone out of the room when conferences are on. In fact, only about four people are to be let in on the secret. Must be some swell story when the movies are trying to keep the plot secret. Usually they broadcast their plots to the world.

THE FRIENDS of Frederick Murnau are finding it difficult to realize that he is gone. The quiet, brilliant young man who looked more Irish than German, had endeared himself to many people. It seems particularly sad that Murnau should be taken now. He had planned to attend the opening of his picture in New York, March 18 and then sail to Germany to see his mother. Think of that mother who was expecting to see her boy. Murnau was one of the few who stood for the best in pictures. He was not going to sell his art. He had to do what he thought was the right thing or not do it at all. He was pleased with "Tabu" which Paramount had just purchased and he was happy. Murnau had the real sense of German hospitality, several times he invited me to his home for luncheon or dinner. He was picturesque in his taste and he did not eat much himself. He was always asking his guests to taste food and that meant. Like all Germans his home was his castle.

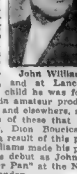
KAY FRANCIS in a smart sports suit. CONSTANCE BENNETT in a dark tailored suit among those glimpsed at the fights. CHARLES FURTHMAN, CHARLES FRANCIS COE, ROGER MARCHETTI and scores of other well-known folk applauding JACK DEMPSEY when he made his appearance. FRANK CRAVEN discoursing on golf in a booth at Al Levy's. . . JOHN CONSIDINE, MR. AND MRS. RAYARD VEILLER among those at the glittering Montmartre. MACK SENNETT and ANDREW CALLAHAN and VICTOR VARCONI patronizing the Brown Derby. LOUIS GASNIER, AL HEERMAN and FRANK BORZAGE not minding about putting on weight, eating plenty of good old sauerkraut and spare ribs at Sam Holland's Corner. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

WILLIAMS IN MANY PLAYS

John Williams, the blond young Englishman who appears in support of Miss Violet Heaviside in her new starring vehicle "Petticoat Influence," which Gilbert Miller presents at the Wilbur, is the son of a colonel in the British Army, who is aide-de-camp to King George V. He was educated at St. Ronan's preparatory school, Worthing, England, and at Lancing College. As a child he was fond of appearing in amateur productions at school and elsewhere, and it was in one of these that the famous actor, Dion Boucicault saw him. As a result of this performance, Williams made his professional stage debut as John in Barrie's "Peter Pan" at the New Theater in London.



John Williams

Then, in 1924, A. H. Woods brought the young man in America to play for him. Since coming to the United States, Williams has appeared in "The Fake," "The Dark Angel," "A Kiss in a Taxi," "The Ghost Train," "Mixed Doubles," "The Happy Husband," with Billie Burke; "Interference," "The High Road" and "Journey's End."

CLEVER TEAM FOR BOSTON

Blossom Seeley and Bennie Fields—blond, blue-eyed queen of syncopation, and the tall, engaging master of jazz and hoofing, which he does in a "shuffling" way peculiarly his own have been together on stage and since they were married about ten years ago. These two favorites are headlining at the RKO Keith-Boston Theater tomorrow in a new series of skits.

Blossom Seeley

"It was when I was playing the Palace in Chicago that I first met Bennie," says Blossom. "Someone told me of a marvelous jazz artist who sang and danced with an extraordinary syncopated rhythm in a night club in the city, so after the show I went down with a party of people to see him.

"Well, it may have been love at first sight, but when I saw Bennie when he joined us at our table it didn't take me long to ask him to join my act. At that time he was appearing in a trio of entertainers so I asked all three of them to come, they were all marvelous performers."

Bach Festival Will Begin on March 24

Those seats which were not subscribed by the series are now to be had for the Bach Festival to be given in Symphony Hall, March 24 29. The concerts of Friday and Saturday, March 27 and 28, falling in the regular series are available only to regular subscribers, but tickets for the other performances may be had. These include two performances of the great Mass in B minor, on Tuesday, March 24, and Sunday, March 29; likewise the performance of Wednesday evening, March 25, when organ and harpsichord music will be played by Wallace Goodrich and Mme. Patorni-Casadesus, and when Miss Perry will give an address on Henry L. Higginson, to whose memory the festival is dedicated

'UNFAITHFUL' TOPS BILL AT THE MET

Terry Houston	Donald Cook
Aunt Jessie	Emily Fitzroy

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

WHEN THE SCREEN goes in for bokum, even the brilliant Ruth Chatterton proves "unfaithful" to her genius. Thus it happens that her new picture is her poorest. Through no fault of her own, mind you. It's a case of being hung, drawn and quartered by the story. Thus it is that the Metropolitan's stage program, following the film, offers real and effective relief, climaxing in the side-splitting slapstick comedy that so merrily winds up the footlight show.

UNFAITHFUL"—THAT'S the feature movie—is the mechanically made and mechanically portrayed story of a girl who wins the hand of an English nobleman, only to have her illusion of love broken by the discovery that he is engaged in an affair with her brother's wife. To protect this sister-in-law she refrains from the divorce court, and decides to "go to the devil" herself, instead. While sowing her wild oats, she does a lot of things, some downright absurd, and others more or less so. When Paul Lukas betrays an interest, she holds him off until in his impatience he threatens to make one of the secret of the dear in-law's marital indiscretions.

UNBELIEVABLE coincidences are happening right along, so one is not shocked to find Miss Chatterton bursting the barriers and visiting Mr. Lukas in his cosy rooms, on the very night that her husband is fleeing with the in-law. Then the incredible creeps up again; husband is killed while in-law escapes without a scratch from a motor mishap. The film might have happily ended it all then and there; but it drags on, with Miss Chatterton still protecting the sister-in-law until the damning facts prove too much even for her boundless pity for the bold, bad kinswoman.

THE PHOTOPLAY is artificial in the extreme, and one heaves a sigh when the two sailors inject some comedy; they at least are natural. The settings are lavish, the photography superb, save that John Cromwell, the director, has done too much superimposing. Mr. Cromwell is below par in his direction; perhaps the story was a milestone about his neck. It is probably the same with the cast: it has good names. Mr. Lukas is the best; Miss Chatterton adequate, is pretty but frequently seems to realise her effort is hopeless against overwhelming odds. Of the rest, Paul Cavanagh, as the husband, Donald Cook, as the brother, and a splendid butler and two breezy jacklars, are outstanding.

ON STAGE, things are far pleasanter and vastly more entertaining. "Down Went McGinty" is a zipping good revue, with the most amusing musical contortionist we ever saw, stopping the show. His name, we are informed, is Wilton Crawley. The McGinty team, with uproariously comic antics, is stellar. There are other classy features, including the grand orchestra, and Benny Meroff

MYSTERY TALE IS FAVORITE OF CAMERAMAN

WHAT IS A cameraman's favorite type of motion picture story and why?

Arthur Reed, who photographed "The Drums of Jeopardy," opening in the Scollay Sunday, gives the answer.

And the answer is just what Reed was doing when asked the question. "The Drums of Jeopardy" is a mystery story, adapted from Harold MacGrath's novel, and a mystery story, he said, gives the cameraman more latitude to follow his own inclination in lighting effects. The more ingenuity he has the more he can show it in mystery setting.

Flat lighting, or the lighting of big interiors in ordinary stories, gives little opportunity for weird or novel effects. The more intensely artistic a cameraman is, the more he wants to play with strange camera angles and tricky lightings, with the natural conclusion that a mystery story is the perfect medium for them

'DIRIGIBLE' IS NEW AVIATION AIR EPIC

THE UNITED STATES is an air-minded nation, and it is the motion picture industry which has helped to make it so. Though there is argument over this statement, men in the picture business generally believe it to be true

Movies which deal with various phases of aviation have always been popular both with the movie public and the producers and in most of them aviation has been shown in a favorable light. All this has developed in this country a definite appreciation of aerial problems and of the glorious achievements of American airmen.

The American public may not be looking to the air in sufficient numbers to bring joy to those commercially interested in aviation, but it is thinking and talking about aerial exploits, and is reading accounts of progress in aky navigation in the newspapers, devouring fiction of a prodigious rate, and patronizing motion pictures which flaunt the exploits of daring aviators on the screens.

CADET RIFLES SEEK HEARST TROPHIES

By LIEUT.-COL. JESS KRUEGER

Chicago, March 13 (U8)—Rifles are cracking these days among cadet outfits in educational institutions throughout the United States and possessions in competition for the William Randolph Hearst marksmanship championships.

RECORD ENTRY

A record entry list of 505 cadet teams has been received by Maj.-Gen. Frank Parker, commanding officer of the Sixth Corps area with headquarters in Chicago, who has been designated as official referee by the War Department.

No other intersectional competition ever conducted has had so many educational institutions involved. Practically every university, college, high school and military academy in the country having R. O. T. C. units is participating.

Official targets have been sent by Gen. Parker to all competing schools, and firing began Feb. 1. The results must be received in the office of Gen. Parker by April 30, when experts will determine the results after carefully examining the relative position of every shot.

BANNER YEAR.

This is the banner year of the competition. The matches were started in 1922 with only 24 teams competing, but the growth has been steady ever since, and this year it far exceeds any other inter-school competition ever held.

Handsome trophies, consisting of cups, specially designed shields, medals and watches, are distributed to the winning sectional and national teams.

Secretary Adams Heading for Balboa

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 13—After four days spent at sea engaged in viewing tactical exercises of the entire fleet, Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, will return to Balboa harbor today for a busy weekend of social and diplomatic functions.

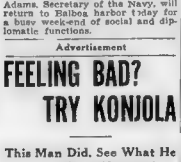
FEELING BAD? TRY KONJOLA

This Man Did. See What He Says About New and Different Medicine.

Strange, but true, in cases where all else tried has failed, Konjola has brought relief and health . . glorious and abundant . . . to sufferers from ills of the stomach, liver kidneys, and bowels, and from rheumatism, neuritis, and r ousness.



MR. HARRY T. WINCHESTER

Don't just wish for health . . . don't just hope you'll get better . . get relief; secure health. How? Well, wherever Konjola has been used it is known for its power against the common ills. Wherever it is known Konjola has brought joy and happiness to sufferers. Why delay? Put Konjola to the test. What Konjola did for . . so happy people it can do for . . m.

Just read what Mr. Harry Winchester, 31 Monument Ave., Charlestown, says about Konjola. Study his experience. It is just like hundreds of others that the Konjola Man at the Epstein Drug Store, Epstein's Scollay Square, can cite just read these grateful words of . r. Winchester:

"Konjola gave me relief after I had completely lost hope. After an operation last October my system was so weakened that I could hardly climb the stairs. I ate very lightly, and even then I suffered with indigestion. I was bilious, and seemed all run down. I used Konjola, and now I can eat food that I never dreamed of eating before. There is never a sign of indigestion and once again I enjoy real health. Is it any wonder that I endorse Konjola?"

Don't take the kind of a medicine that you need and want? See your druggist; demand Konjola and get it . . don't accept a substitute.

The Konjola Man is at Epstein's, Scollay Square (Epstein Drug Co.), Boston, where he is daily telling the amazing story of Konjola. Konjola is sold by all leading druggists everywhere.

'TIP' O'NEILL AT NEW STUDIO

After broadcasting 37 weeks from the WLEX studio in Lexington, during which time he achieved the reputation for being the fastest talker on the air, Francis P. (Tip) O'Neill's night police reporter for the Boston Evening American, will launch his in-town broadcasting from the new W L E X studios in the Hotel Buckminster at 7:45 tomorrow evening. O'Neill will give his talk on "Getting the News While the Public Sleeps." Much interest is being manifested by listeners in O'Neill's rapid-fire talks and particularly so after Supt. Michael H. Crowley of the Boston police department stated that O'Neill was the fastest talker on the air and could defeat Floyd Gibbons in a 15-minute word-a-ling-ing contest.

T. P. O'Neill

The new WLEX studios at the Buckminster have just been completed; and the Boston Evening American maintains WLEX studios in Boston that station now broadcasts from two in-town points.

AT THE LISTENING POST

THERE IS A widespread impression that radio is a wireless proposition entirely. To the contrary, hook-ups that make a national chain operation possible require many thousands of miles of wire in order that a given program may be carried from the originating point to outlets in distant cities. This is a fact not too generally known.

CUPID RIDES IN TOY BALLOON

Omaha, Neb., March 13 (AP)—There's romance in the air of the Far North country.

After a dinner party last November Mrs. Robert Tunberg, released a toy balloon bearing her name and address and thought little more about it. Imagine her surprise when she opened her mail and found the following letter from Henry A. Prentice, a miner in Fairbanks, Alaska:

"We were out of fresh meat and I tracked a bear up the canyon and finally dropped him on a high ledge 50 or 60 feet in the side," wrote Prentice. "It surely was tough getting to him, but I made it. On the way up I found the balloon."

"You don't happen to be single and unattached, by chance, and willing to cook the grub for a couple of lonesome old batches away up here in our man's country?" the miner asked.

Kabibble Kabaret—By Hershfield

DEAR MR KABIBBLE,
DO YOU BELIEVE IN WIVES SMOKING?

TIME THEY CLEANED UP THEIR OWN ASHES OFF THE CARPET

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

THE TELL-TALE LIGHT

Romance in Smuggling

IF TERRY TRAVERS hadn't been in love with Sheila Byrne he never would have tinkered with the rules of the lighthouse service, and if he had not done that there wouldn't have been any chance hookup of romance and the Rock Point smuggling gang, Terry and Sheila wouldn't have 10 thousand dollars in the bank and I wouldn't be a godfather now. But I'm getting way ahead of my story.

The chief sent me to Fothergill, down on the Jersey coast, because some other agents had narrowed down a net that seemed to point out Fothergill as the landing point for a big value smuggling ring that defied all efforts at detection.

It just happened that I landed in the home of Sheila Byrne's mother when I went looking for a room. It was just dumb luck that my room was one fronting out on Surf st., next door to that of Sheila, and looking, as did her room, out through windows toward the lonely, ruzzed turret that housed the Rock Point light.

Every night, just at nine o'clock, the great rotating beam of the Blue Point light came to a stop. Sometimes three, sometimes as long as ten seconds it remained stationary, cutting its white path through the night just over the peaked roof of the old-fashioned home of Sheila's mother.

It seemed to me to be peculiar, to say the least. I used a small periscope, one night a little later, to watch the windows of Sheila's room from my own. When I saw a series of dots and dashes from a flashlight, pointing out to sea, I felt I had a lead to my mystery. If it wasn't the smuggling ring it must at least be signaling of one kind or another, out to the mosquito fleet that carried booze in from the mother ships laying off shore twelve miles or more out to the open sea.

Carefully the men who came ashore from the smacks were checked. None of them were found to bring anything ashore. Yet, in the first ten days I was in Fothergill the Chief found word of two shipments, one of gems and one of narcotics, getting through.

It was Sheila who suggested that she go with me to the seaward side at night, and watch. We arranged to have one of my men flash back a message she dictated. We watched, again saw the beacon cut through the spars and rigging of the sloop, again saw the tiny dots and dashes flashing back a message through the night. But it was Sheila who suddenly caught my hand and fiercely whispered.

"Listen."

Faintly there came the sound of a sort of hum, a gentle splash, and then silence. She knew, she said, and I thought I knew, too, that there was no one aboard any of the smacks anchored there in the inlet. Yet, unmistakably, ripples, or at least the disturbance of a body beneath the stern of that one sloop whose masts stuck up into the light of the beacon.

I watched the shore, and so did Sheila, but we saw no swimmer nor a boat, not even a swimming log that might be carrying anything ashore.

Night found us again on the narrow spit of land upon which stood the lighthouse. Again the beacon paused, and again we heard that splash and saw the bubbles. We fairly piled into a boat and pulled alongside. We search that sloop from stem to stern—and found nothing.

Sheila it was who stood by the mainmast, and then suddenly called to me to come to her there. She was fingering two thin strands of insulated wire, like the sometimes finds in use on a radio. She pointed out that there was no system of electric lights used on any fishing smack, and that seldom were they equipped with wireless. I had one of the nimbler agents shin up that mast, following out the strands of wire. A minute or two passed and then came his hail. He lowered down by the thin wires a curious contrivance.

It turned out to be a metal disc, painted, except for a tiny margin, with selenium. Selenium has the property of expanding rapidly under light, and of being a good conductor of electricity. The two wires up the mainmast led to the metal disc. Following the wires from the deck floor we went below and then to the stern.

There we had to light a lantern, and I got the shock of my life when an electric motor began to pulse, there was a whirring away of a trap door in the stern. Even as we watched the trap came back again to its original position. Then I got the drift.

The selenium disc had been placed high up on the mast so that it came into range of the beacon beams from the lighthouse, when Travers happened it to rest on the House of Byrne. That dazzling bright beam expanded the selenium, completed the electric contact, and opened the trap door in the stern.

I didn't wait. I went over the stern of that boat. A hunch proved to be a good one. Directly below that automatic trap, in less than six feet of water, I came upon an oil skin wrapped package.

Mordaunt, who owned the boat, is doing his second year in jail right now. And Terry and Sheila have their ten thousand dollars' reward money in the bank. I know because I've just been down, in my role of godfather for the christening of Terry junior.

"Spring" -:- How to Know Her -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

HOW TO KNOW SPRING, Winter-King's sunny daughter? Easy. And I don't mean by that one old reliable way of knowing the far stir of her approach even before her primrose feet be seen—by the symptoms of Spring fever. No, not that way. We all know on these funny, sunny, still days of faint blue sky, when the air feels like Indian Summer, WHY we meet the advance guard of "thiers" on the country roads; WHY we remember good picnic places; WHY we begin to wonder in which of all the wonderful places in the world we will spend our vacation; WHY we begin to chafe at desks and feel abused because we have to work at all; WHY our head dimly aches, and our heart, too; WHY we begin to feel deadly weary of what we are doing, whatever it IS, and suddenly wish with all the might that's in us for the high bills or the blue sea that we played our particular childhood in. We know WHY. We know that Spring is coming. She's on the way!

But sometimes the still sunny day planted in the midst of Winter vanishes, and Winter howls again, even on the day before Spring arrives. And then will you know her when she's already here? How will you know her when her ole Dad Winter is displaying a final flourish of snow upon the first buds?

Why—she'll be wearing, the impatient darling, her new Spring HAT! And Pan will be holding the mirror up to her delightful face!

Sometimes she has to be wearing a fur coat, she'll be in her new Spring capote!

There are other ways to know her, to be sure. She makes little boys in school sleepy. She makes big-boy writers—oh sas weerrrry! Just so soon as she has passed—old gentlemen begin to caper—and young ones to sigh or turn in at flower shops. Old ladies turn in at the door of the first "romantic" one—and young ones preen their feathers and buy salmon-pink and forget-me-not gloves and tapel flowers! Oh, you can tell. But the headgear is a sure one, and quick.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

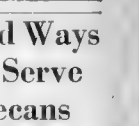
Good Ways to Serve Pecans

By MARTHA LEE.
From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WLEA.

TODAY I SING of pecans, those large flavored nuts so high in food value and so delightful to eat and interesting to serve in many ways. Pecans should be combined with foods not too rich in themselves, as they contain a generous amount of oil.

Here are favorite recipes that come to us from the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Oklahoma—the home of pecan crops.



Martha Lee

PECAN FILLED WAFERS

1-3 cup sugar
1 well-beaten egg
¾ cup flour
¼ tsp. vanilla.

Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually. Beat in the well-beaten egg, vanilla and flour. Spread ⅛ of an inch thick on the back of a greased baking tin. Bake in a hot oven (400 deg. F.) about 5 minutes, until a delicate brown. Immediately upon removing from the oven cut the cookies in 1½ inch squares and put them together like a sandwich, with the pecan filling. These must be put together while they are still hot or they will break.

PECAN FILLING

⅛ cup milk.
1 tbsp. butter.

Cook the milk and sugar together, stirring constantly until it boils. Continue cooking until the mixture will form a very soft ball in cold water. Remove from fire, add nuts, butter and vanilla. Allow to stand in cold water until the cooking are baked or until the mixture starts to thicken. Then beat until the mixture just begins to set, creamy and the consistency of fudge. Spread between two of the cookies while they are still warm.

PECAN NUT ROLL

Caramel:
1 cup sugar.
⅓ cup light corn syrup.
1 tbsp. butter.
1 tsp. vanilla.

Mix sugar, butter and milk. Cook over a low flame, stirring constantly until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Add cream slowly so that the mixture does not stop boiling, and continue cooking until mixture forms a firm ball in cold water (247 deg. F.). Remove from fire, add vanilla. When cooled slightly, dip the following fondant roll in this caramel. Then remove immediately and roll in chopped pecans. Place on parafin paper to cool. Serve in slices.

Beware Freak 'Cures' for Hiccoughs

By DR. COPELAND.

AT SOME time or other all of us have suffered from hiccoughing. Sometimes it is most annoying and difficult to control. An occasional person seems to be extremely susceptible to this symptom while a few are rarely if ever sufferers from it. I have seen cases which have baffled even the most expert physicians.

Dr. Copeland

No doubt you have recently read in the newspapers about a young girl who suffered recurrent attacks for more than a year. This girl lived in Detroit and during her illness had advice from more than 5000 physicians who were in Detroit attending a medical convention. In spite of this accumulated experience, little by way of aid could be offered. The poor child died.

The treatment depends upon the cause of the disorder. If due to stomach or intestinal disturbance, the irritating matter must be removed. This is best accomplished by washing out the stomach or by intestinal flushings using enemas and irrigations.

This condition usually brings forth a flood of "cure cures" ranging from sudden fright to liberal doses of snuff, salt or sugar. Holding ice in the mouth is frequently suggested, as are other methods as old as the Greeks. At times these give relief and at other times they fail.

Never allow hiccoughs to persist without consulting a physician. Certain complications can be avoided by early attention.

Answers to Health Queries

M. B. Q.—What can be done for a skin condition known as "lupus"—is there a definite cure?

A.—This disturbance should have proper medical attention and advice. Proper treatment should give increased comfort. The general health is a factor in such treatment.

Tiger Heart

"I WANT to tell you," the letter continued, "that I got a hundred times more love in my heart for you than anyone else has and there won't be any trouble about money either. As I said, I'd die for you or do anything else and I have done something else for your sake, darling. I know you haven't got as much money as the people you run with, but don't worry. Why should they have everything and you have practically nothin? What did they ever do to earn what they got?

"They've got more than they'll ever be able to spend, and a little less or more won't hurt them. Jim, I know you think I'm a bad girl and awful, but I love you so terribly much, so terrible much. Sometimes it seems like my brains will come out from thinking about you so much. Jim, for God's sake, leave the other girls alone and get in touch with me. It will be for your good and for mine, I've got enough now, Jim, I can get more up to a business of your own so you won't have to worry and take orders from other guys. I did it because I love you so much that no sacrifice is too great for me. I'd be willing to die or go to jail or anything for your sake, Jim—I don't even ask you to marry me if you will just love me a little and let me see you sometimes where there won't be anyone to bother. I want to be with you and let you know what is in my heart. I'm sure you will not reject it and you will make me happy, the happiest girl on earth. Maybe you think I'm crazy, crazy in love with you, but I know that, I've told you so once before when I had a chance. You were so sweet to me then. You're the only love I ever had in my life and I realize that you are far above me. None of these other people are your equal either, so I don't feel so badly about that part of it. Don't, for God sake, look right through me and treat me like dirt. Give me a chance to tell you what I have on my mind. I'm all for you, darling boy, and you will find that I will be a true and loving friend to you till the breath goes out of my body. Meet me tomorrow night, anytime after midnight, down under the elm tree at the gate on the left hand side, because I will be waiting there. Please be there, Jim, please, as I have something for you and it's for your advantage to be there. I'm not lying, on my word of honor. Goodnight my wonderful sweetheart. It's been a relief to me just to write these things because they have been bottled up in my heart until I've been almost crazy.

"Always, Your Sweetheart.

"M. SMITH."

Garson slowly folded the closely written missive, his face serious. A moisture glistened on Connie's lids.

"I think it is pitiful, too pathetic," she said, softly.

He nodded.

"I don't think, however, Tracy ought to see this," he said, slowly. "I can't understand what is in about a man like him that fascinates women even without loving him. You once intended to marry him. Kitty adores him and even this poor half-demented creature has fallen under his spell—yet he is no wonderful person. He is mildly good looking and he has a sort of social gift, but his destiny seems to menace the lives of women."

"Women are so foolish," Connie admitted. "Poor Mary Smith—now we know what became of mother's pearls."

"We'll get the pearls back all right," Garson assured her, "but it may be a little difficult to convince Kitty about this."

It's Unwise for Her to Waste Time on Him

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very fond of a man who I feel is "more sinned against than sinning." Owing to the depression he hasn't had a job in over a year, but his wife, who is a very cold-hearted woman, is assistant buyer in one of our largest department stores and makes a big salary. There are three children and they have a housekeeper and a nurse. My friend is 15 years my senior and is lovely to me when his wife is away for her firm, but never sees me when she is in town. People say herd things about him, but I can't help it. I love him, and he says some time he hopes to be able to get a divorce and marry me, but it can't be arranged now. My girl friends just laugh at me and say he'll never leave his meal ticket. Do you think I am foolish to care so much and refuse to go out with others?

MYRTLE.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear Myrtle—Yes, indeed, I think you're very foolish to waste your precious youth on a married man 15 years older than you are who is being supported by his wife. How far can you trust a man who is evidently deceiving his wife—the real man of the family? It's been my experience that a man of this type never dreams of divorcing his "meal ticket." I very earnestly advise you to drop him.

Is Her Mother Jealous?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 23 and my friend is 28. We have been keeping company for two years and have been engaged one year. He has a lovely sister and I love her dearly. I thought he had a lovely mother until a short time ago, when my fiance gave me a beautiful engagement ring and told his mother we were engaged. Since then she has treated me most unkindly. I visit his home with and without him. His mother is lovely to me when I call, but when he is with me she is very cool to him.

THEE MA.

Dear Thelma: Are you sure your fiance's sister is right when she says her mother is jealous of you? In which case she would hardly treat you as you describe—lovely. Little resentments would be bound to crop out; she couldn't be consistently charming all the time. Perhaps he may have other reasons for being "cool" to her son. She may feel that he can no' assume the responsibility of supporting a wife at the present time. Be patient and try to muster a little pity if it is jealousy.

Chrysler Tells Of New Pickup In Auto Sales

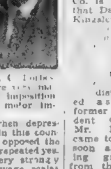
By B. C. Forbes

New York, March 13—Walter P. Chrysler, who sails for a month's business-pleasure trip to Europe to-morrow

"The first real definite improvement in the buying of automobiles in this country, Europe is showing more interest, although this has not yet materialized in greatly increased orders. While



B. C. Forbes

I definitely expect to expand our sales there very substantially following the imposition of the stiff tax on motor imports."

Mr. Crysler, even when depression was at its worst in this country, uncompromisingly opposed the cutting of wages. He repeated yesterday that he felt very strongly that generally lower wage scales would curtail buying power and therefore should be avoided.

"About six weeks ago the new attitude of the buying public changed. People seemed glad to get 1930 behind them. They began, after the turn of the year to feel better.

"Many of those who had sold stocks to establish income tax losses, or for other reasons, found that they couldn't get their securities back without bidding higher prices for them. As a result, the Street in Wall and elsewhere had a pick-up of confidence, and consumer buying power began to improve.

"I see the first of the year trading indicates that during the next 60 days a still larger percentage of the unemployed will be put back to work. In turn, will help consumption. It is a fact, too, that a great many of those whose incomes were reduced at all curtailed their expenditures. These doubtless will get in some loose ing up in this direction.

"As I told you last fall, I am against any put in wage rates. Some already has taken place. Production than any other crisis dealt with loyalty and sacrifices."

We had lunch in the upper, pastely-named Cloud Club, which makes its home on the 66th floor and 68th floors of the Chrysler Building. As many as 3500 people have visited the Chrysler Tower, 1046 feet above the Lexington Ave. line of New York's streets—in one day.

"I am very much pleased with the operation of this building," said Mr. Chrysler. "Notwithstanding all the office buildings which has gone up in New York, we have had a demand for space that is highly satisfactory, better than earning its keep."

Having often wondered whether the topmost floors in cloud-piercing buildings were the first to be rented, I was interested in learning from Mr. Chrysler that such are the least crowded thus far in his 77-story structure. The reason for this, he explained, is that people are not interested in living in the highest floors. I hope this will foster a movement that those who occupy them will appreciate. As I am a collector myself, I feel we are doing something for them. We hope to do well enough to allow for expansion and continuation. The way the books have been received so far gives every indication that this is possible.

"Let me add, $10 per volume is cheap enough if it can whet a person away from the pantomania of the business world so substantiated by the conversation at the luncheon table story."

Most fathers are disappointed when their sons do not follow in their footsteps. Not so Mr. Chrysler.

"I wouldn't wish on him, if I could, the responsibility I have had to shoulder," he declared. "The man who gets into business on a very big scale becomes a slave."

Be that as it may, Walter P. Chrysler, though he may work like a slave, has always struck me as a very healthy, happy robust, buoyant specimen of humanity.

UTILITIES ARE MAINSTAY OF BIG POOLS

By FRANK H. MELOON

That important utilities are the mainstay of powerful pools in Wall Street with eager selective Boston buying taking place has been perfectly evident in all recent rallies from reactions. Pulls appear to have every likelihood to be carried further forward. The "Streets" filled with rumors of the formation of new super power and holding systems of various kinds, under the most powerful financial backing.

Interesting in New England in connection with changes in leadership of the New York Life Insurance Co. is the fact that Darwin P. Pivotal Industries Give Favorable Reports

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, March 13—Latest reports from the steel, automobile and other of the so-called pivotal industries are nothing to be gloomy about.

A few weeks ago the skeptics appeared in droves when leading men of business predicted a quickening of the industrial recovery near the end of the first quarter of the year.

These men were not afraid to sign their names to their forecast, and the roster of business optimists contained such names as Alfred Sloan, president of General Motors; James Farrell, head of United States Steel, the world's largest manufacturing concern, Walter Gifford, president of the five billion dollar American Telephone Co.; and Julius Barnes, head of the Chamber of Commerce.

They were not talking from hearsay, but were in possession substantial and reliable reports and statements which appeared ample basis for the rosy predictions presented.

Now their forecasts appear to be making good, and the latest survey of the steel trade by the Iron Age contains convincing evidence of the slow but uninterruptedly steady recovery in a major industry.

The automobile industry has just been geared up to the production of 1,000,000 cars and trucks this month, the reports from field agents indicating a better demand for cars than existed six months ago.

This may be due in part to the increased prosperity of the Uncle Sam to the war veterans. In fact it is bad economics to refuse to consider $600,000,000 more or less, in new spending capacity by a group of good spenders as a very important factor in the spring of business.

The momentum set in motion by this seemingly inconsequential item may well broaden out into other lines and be reckoned a ... of the U. S. toward business recovery in 1931.

The ... performance of the Steel Corporation ... loss of 167,153 tons in unfilled orders in February was ... that it reflected a gain in shipments. The steel industry is now operating at 55 per cent of capacity against 53 per cent last week and 91 per cent in December.

Sweets Co. Shows 2 Months' Net Up

Sweets Co. of America for the two months ended February 28, 1931, report a net profit of $17,321 after charges and Federal taxes, as compared with $10,312 in the like period of last year.

Rare Animals Finally Delivered and Can Be Viewed Now

Frank Buck finishes today the epic of bringing his two prized rhino calves alive to America. He fought thugs in the jungles, outschemed scheming natives and got his prizes on the deck of a ship. But even nature seemed in league against him, and today he tells how he saved his rhinos in the face of a raging typhoon.

CHAPTER XIII.

An American ship, the S. S. Lake Gitano, bound for Hong Kong, was in port when we reached Calcutta. She was due to sail in a week, which was good

I arranged for passage for Lal and myself and the rhinos and the many other specimens I was bringing back. I had two fine shipping crates made of heavy teak plank for the rhinos, got my other specimens properly caged and crated for the trip and we sailed from Calcutta on the 30th day of March, 1923, with the rhinos and other specimens as deck cargo.

Heavy seas were encountered in the Bay of Bengal and several times we had to call out the crew during the night to move or lash down the big rhino crates (the new hard-wood cages with their occupants weighed more than three tons together), and also to move and tie up the two full-grown elephants which were carried on one of the aft hatches.

The Gitano was a small boat, loaded so she was uncomfortably low in the water, and with the sea running heavy we had to be continually on guard. With the ship's decks barely five feet above the water there was constant danger of the decks being awash

ARRIVAL AT HONG-KONG.

The Gitano called in at Penang on the Mala, Peninsula and from there I took a train down to Singapore, leaving Lal in charge of the animals. I beat the Gitano into Singapore by a full day and on her arrival there had the specimens at the compound moved

SHIFT IN H-Y RACE COURSE

New Haven, March 13—Yale and Harvard athletic officials have determined to row upstream all three races of the annual Yale-Harvard regatta on the Thames on Friday, June 19, because of tide conditions. The varsity four-mile event cannot be started until 8:05 o'clock daylight saving time, one of the latest starting moments for holding the classic.

The four-mile event will be rowed from the drawbridge to the finish line opposite the Harvard boat-ways at Red Top, close to the west bank of the Thames.

The freshman event, which will open the program of the three races, will be started at 10 o'clock daylight saving time, and the junior varsity race as soon after the close of the freshman event as possible, probably about 10:45 o'clock.

SHORE WAVES POP BOTTLE, DEFIES CROWD

BARRY'S CHIN IS SPLIT AS BRUINS LOSE

Chicago, March 13 (INS)—Marty Barry of the Boston Bruins bore a bad skate cut on the chin today as material evidence of the near riot which nearly broke up the Bruins-Chicago Blackhawks National League hockey game here last night.

The game ended 26 seconds after the melee in a 3 to 2 victory for the Chicago team.

Two fist fights broke out simultaneously on the ice as the match neared its close. Romnes and Barry were trading punches in one corner while Shore and Somers were punching each other about in another section.

Half of each team joined in the melee, which continued until police and ushers restored order.

The contest developed into something resembling an old-time shinny match after the opening faceoff and reached the climax a minute before the game ended when players of both teams engaged in a free-for-all battle.

The fans directed their assorted confetti and verbal barrage against Shore who left the rink waving a pop bottle which had been hurled in his direction, a concrete evidence of his defiance to the enraged fans.

Somers and Shore were awarded major penalties. At one time in the third period there were only four men of each team on the ice.

This Is How Jim Does It

The favorite hold of JIM LONDOS is the further arm and crotch hold, more colorfully called the "airplane spin." Left—the start. Londos grasps opponent's right arm with left hand, turning and bringing his head under it. Pulling the arm over left shoulder Londos reaches for the crotch with right arm, securing a grip on opponent's right leg. Right—the finish. Londos raises opponent on shoulders, whirls him about six or seven times to produce dizziness and then hurls him crashing to the floor. Jim will try out his favorite hold on Gino Garibaldi in the Garden, tonight.

In the second game of their series, the University Club and the Boston Hockey Club will clash tonight at the Boston Arena.

After a wide open free scoring game, the University Club nosed out a victory in the opening contest of the series which decide the Greater Boston championship. Although the University Club drew first blood, the teams are evenly matched and in all probability, it will require a third contest to decide the winner of the series.

Through the acquisitions of Doug Everett, former Dartmouth captain; Sam Batchelder, Johnny Garrison and Del Everett of Harvard, University is at war strength for the Boston Hockey Club.

Complete Card at Garden Tonight

MAIN BOUT

SEMIFINAL

Ray Steele of Glendale, Cal., vs. Matros Kirilenko, Russian champion.

THIRTY-MINUTE LIMIT TO A DECISION

Rudy Dusek of Omaha, Neb. vs. Floyd Marshall of Los Angeles, Cal.

By RINGSIDE

Jim Londos, who has won five wrestling bouts within a week, will try to add one more victory to his long list of triumphs when he clashes with Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight, in a one-fall match to a finish at the Boston Garden tonight.

It will be Londos' second Boston appearance this season. He defeated Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark., at the Garden last month.

Since last showing here, Londos has beaten Karl Pojello, Lithuanian champion. This contest was staged in Philadelphia and attracted a capacity crowd.

Londos is a favorite to win. He is also the choice of Jack Conway, Boston Evening American boxing and wrestling expert.

Ray Fabiani will introduce a new feat star to Boston fans tonight when he pits Ray Steele, California wrestler, against Matros Kirilenko, champion of Russia, in the semifinal, which has a 45-minute time limit.

Earl McCready, former Oklahoma A. and M. A. A. U. champion, will also sweep into action tonight. He will have Jack Washburn of California as an opponent in a 30 minute limit match.

Rudy Dusek, who has only lost to Jim Londos in Boston, will collide with Floyd Marshall, a newcomer from California, in another 30 minute contest.

Dick Daviscourt of Chicago and Paul Jones of Texas will produce the action in the other 30 minute bout.

RED SOX WIN IN EXHIBITION

Pensacola, Fla., March 13—The Red Sox won their first exhibition game here yesterday, defeating the Spring Hill College nine of Mobile, Ala., 4 to 1, in nine innings at Legion Field.

Tom Oliver, the hard-clubbing outfielder, scored the first run in the second inning.

Three more runs were made in the seventh by Frank Milliken, Hal Rhyne and Russ Scarritt.

Bob Kline, Walter Murphy and Frankie Milliken, of Walpole, worked on the slab for Boston, and "Muddy" Ruel was behind the plate.

Bowser Says Ex-Grid Stars Aid Grappling

Paul Bowser, Boston wrestling promoter, today charged that Ray Fabiani's attack on the college wrestlers was merely a case of sour grapes.

"The popularity wrestling is enjoying today is due to the fact so many college stars have entered the game," said Bowser. "I believe Gus Sonnenberg has done more than any other individual to make wrestling popular.

"When I featured such wrestlers as Jim Londos, now head man for Fabiani, I was lucky to draw $6000 to $8000. After George Calza beat Londos at the Arena, the Greek wasn't worth much to me as a drawing card.

"Wrestling was in a sad state when Sonnenberg busted along. The public had tired of seeing the foreign groups battle each other.

"Then Sonnenberg put fizz and dash into the sport. He took the same chances on the mat he had on the gridiron. The result was he drew $78,000 with Lewis at the Garden. In five matches at the Garden Sonnenberg drew $350,000. During the two years he was champion he drew more than $1,000,000.

George Will Also Be Great Card, Says Bowser

"Ed George, the new champion, will prove even a greater drawing card than Sonnenberg. Fabiani cannot truthfully say George came from the gridiron to the mat as he was A. A. U. wrestling champion before he entered the pro ranks. He also competed in the Olympic games.

"Fabiani and Jack Curley have tried to exploit college stars, but have been unable to develop men of the caliber of Sonnenberg and George.

"Fabiani has used Jim McMillen, Earl McCready, Rev. Charles Urban, Dr. Ralph Wilson and numerous other college stars in his bills. Because they have failed to go over like Sonnenberg and George, he now attacks college men in the wrestling game.

"Fabiani is still featuring Londos, whom I discarded years ago after he had been licked by Calza, Lewis and Stecher.

"In addition to college stars, I have been showing Lewis, Stecher, Calza, all three of whom have licked Londos, Sherry, Kozloff, Stasiak, McKay and a great many other boys who are good wrestlers, but who have not had the advantages of a college education.

Football Players Make the Best Wrestlers

"I find the college athletes, especially the football players, make rapid strides in wrestling. They have the physical makeup and the intelligence to master the fine points of the game.

"Just watch this youngster, Al Morelli of Boston College. He improves with each match, and a year from now will be as great a wrestler as Sonnenberg or George."

ART SHIRES IS MISSING

Hot Springs, Ark., March 13 (AP)—Usually easy to locate by the sound of his voice, Art Shires is missing—or at least the management of the Milwaukee Brewers of the American Association can't find him.

The "Great One's" coming here has been heralded daily for a week, but so far Art has failed to put in appearance for spring training.

President Louis Nahin of the Brewers decided last night Shires had delayed his appearance long enough and sent out a tracer in the form of a telegram, and it came back undelivered. Nahin said he had no idea where Art is or when he would report, but that he was long overdue.

LOUGHRAN 6-5 CHOICE TO WIN

New York, March 12 (INS)—Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, former light-heavyweight champion, was installed a 6 to 5 favorite to defeat Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, in their ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Jack Sharkey will act as Schaaf's second. Schaaf has won two out of three previous fights with Loughran.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON.

Golf's Greatest Teacher

By "working" the left arm clear through, as I call it, I mean that you make your left arm maintain its forward swing, or pressure with the club, as far through the ball as you can reach with it, without unhooking yourself, so to speak. I mean in this that you go as far out there with your left arm as you can go without releasing your body — which means your head. Your head keeps back, and that holds the body, so you "hit past your chin." Doing this, you swing from the inside out—all the way. This is vastly different from swinging down to the ball and then lunging or throwing at it, which action is virtually sure to cause you to move your head forward and with it, your body.

Passing the Puck

Regardless of whether they win or lose, if the Bruin Cubs continue to play the article of hockey they showed against Springfield last night at the Boston Garden, they are going to become a great hockey attraction.

The Cubs did not deserve to lose last night. In fact, they should have been victorious with goals to spare. But it was just one of those nights when the breaks failed to favor Powers' team.

The deciding goal which Dick Benson scored less than a minute before the final bell came with Benny Grant well out of his net, and the Indians returned home with a 4-to-3 win.

The Cubs' first line, Lloyd Klein, Eddie Burke and Yank Boyd, gave a wonderful exhibition of combination play during the first period. They were using a short, fast pass, which made the clever Springfield club appear helpless.

Swinging into the National Hockey League, the Philadelphia Quakers are responsible for the elimination of the Detroit Falcons. Of the four games won by the Quakers this season two of them were from Jack Adams' heroes.

The Canadiens still hold a one-point edge over the Americans, as they turned in their first victory of the season over the Canadiens and the Ottawa Senators were shut out by Eddie Gerard's Gotham outfit.

Incidentally the Americans are a good bet to beat the Rangers Sunday night in New York.

Now it looks as though the Bruin Cubs and the Philadelphia Arrows would fight it out to the final game of the season. The Cubs are listed to play two games with the Rhode Island Reds, who are not easy pickings for any club, but the Arrows have a couple of tilts remaining with the Springfield Indians. The Cubs and Arrows will also play New Haven.

Manager Eddie Powers was very much disappointed that the Cubs did not at least get a tie with the Indians. He was pleased at the type of hockey played by his boys and feels that they will break through against the Reds.

There must have been moments last evening when Benny Grant wished that he was back in Toronto. The Indians swept down on him time and again from all angles and how he managed to keep all but four shots out of the nets, will always remain a mystery.

Jim Sliney, the Holy Cross center ice man, who was operated on for appendicitis last Sunday, is making a rapid recovery. Sliney will be a candidate for the University Club next season, as he will graduate from Holy Cross this June.

"Jim is in the best shape of his career," said Conway. "He has been working hard for the past month and is ready to meet any man in the world. He is confident that he will defeat Garibaldi tonight."

1931 TEAM IS PERFECT MACHINE

By JOE CASHMAN

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13—Say or think what you will of chain store baseball, it's the best system yet devised for producing big league pennant winners.

It gave the St. Louis Cardinals three championship teams in the past five years, and will give it another this season unless some supercutfit has been developed in the National circuit.

The 1930 Cards were strong; the 1931 Cards are stronger. They could have finished in front by a much larger margin than they did last fall had they hustled all the way.

It is a club without a weakness. It has pitching, fielding and batting strength. It has youth, speed and experience.

Untried rookies, from present indications, will be called upon to do a lot of the work in the coming campaign. No other club in baseball could figure to get away far with material of this sort, but the Cards can without much risk.

For these Mound City youngsters have been brought along gradually from Class B or lower right through Class AA and they wouldn't be up if they weren't ready.

Cards Win Easily, Even Without Stars

Against the Braves yesterday such stars as Frankie Frisch, Taylor Douthit and Chick Hafey were missing, yet their absence wasn't even slightly noticeable as Gabby Street's future greats romped to an easy 12 to 6 triumph.

There are 12 pitchers on the staff and every one, regular and rookie, was a winner last year. The veterans, Bill Hallahan, Burleigh Grimes, Flint Rhem, Jess Haines, Sylvester Johnson, Jim Lindsey and John Grabowski, all won far more than they lost and all the newcomers were rated among the best minor league hurlers of the season.

Jerome "Dazzy" Dean, said by competent critics to be the best kid hurler to enter the big show in 20 years, won 26 and lost 10 at San Antonio and blanked the Pirates in his only big league start.

How are you going to beat that gang?

Braves Play World Champs Tomorrow

The Braves couldn't today, and tomorrow they must face a club that ought to be just as hard to lick, the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics.

The A's aren't at their best right now, as the two wins in three starts the Cards gained over them proves, but they are far from weak at any time, and Connie Mack will have to play a lot better ball than it has on the past three afternoons to get back into the win column.

SHARKEY NOT TO FIGHT PRIMO

New York, March 13 (INS)—Plans of Jimmy Johnston and Humbert Fugazy for staging a Primo Carnera-Jack Sharkey fight in Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, have apparently gone aglimmering.

Leon See, manager of Carnera today announced that he had decided to string along with Madison Square Garden and that Primo would appear exclusively for that organization.

See assured President William Carey of the Garden that Carnera was managed solely by himself and that he had decided to cast his lot with the Garden.

Johnston, however, it was indicated, will make a fight for Carnera's services and if he fails to land him plans to stage a Sharkey-Mickey Walker fight in Brooklyn.

Bring 'Em Back Alive

By Frank Buck With Edward Anthony

down to the dock and ready to be loaded, for the ship was to remain at Singapore only a few hours.

The trip from here up to Hong Kong was without incident. I had made telegraphic arrangements from Calcutta for shipping out of Hong Kong on the S. S. President Wilson and fortunately our boat and the Wilson pulled into Hong Kong at the same time.

The two ships made fast on either side of the dock and the transshipment of my animals was made. As fast as the crates and cages were lowered onto the pier from the Gitano they were heaved aboard the Wilson.

I had calculated on stowing my cargo on the aft decks of the President Wilson, owing to the fact that this portion of the ship had recently been reconstructed and had been changed into third-class quarters for the carrying of Filipino steerage passengers, the only available space for my cargo was on the forward deck. These big Pacific liners are sufficiently high out of the water so that in ordinary weather this is a safe enough place to carry live stock.

HIT BY TYPHOON

While I should have liked a more sheltered section for my specimens, I took without complaint the only space that was available for me. I did manage to find a shelter away up on the hurricane deck for most of my birds. But the elephants were placed on top of number one hatch and the rhinos were set down between the first and second hatches, while the smaller crates containing my anoas, orang-utans and various other animals were stacked up against the forward bulkhead.

By this time I had a right to expect some peace of mind. I had assigned the task of food in getting my rhinos to the point where at last they were on the way to Java.

I discovered that I weighed 20 pounds less than when I originally set out for Siam, but I felt well worn with the task of getting those troublesome Indian rhinos loaded for the trip, and I felt like easing up a bit.

I didn't get the rest I was looking for. I got the tons of the typhoon.

All hands were called out. My cages and crates were made fast with extra cleverings. The seas lashed by murderous winds, mounted higher and higher and finally broke in torrents over the bow.

FEARFUL ABOUT RHINOS.

The captain—that grand old seaman, Hendrik Jansen—issued orders that no one was to go forward. I knew that the ship was pitching and watched mountains of water break over the forward decks. The force of the waves, in other words, was broken by the base of the hatch. The smaller stock was covered with canvas and well lashed against the bulkhead; so I felt reasonably sure that they would stand the storm, too.

But I was much concerned about the two huge rhino crates. Though they were well lashed when we first hit the storm, they were taking a terrific pounding, the kind that loosens deck cargo. Once heavy crates of this kind get loose, the tremendous force of the waves may at any moment send them spinning across the deck; and when this sort of cargo does shift it takes everything on the deck with it.

As daylight broke next morning I was on the bridge scanning the forward deck to see what harm the terrific seas of the night had wrought among my animals.

The elephants were trumpeting loudly as they faced the howling wind and the tons of sea water that came rushing over the ship. As a great wave would burst over the bow, tons of sea water that came rushing over the ship. As a great wave would burst over the bow, tons of sea water that came rushing over the ship. As a great wave would burst over the bow,

Port of Boston News

By JAMES J. DELANEY

After a storm of opposition from Boston harbor interests, the bill introduced in the Massachusetts Legislature relative to the appointments of pilot commissioners and governing regulations of pilotage was reported unfavorably by the House and Senate.

Shipping interests in this port showed a more concerted front than has ever been known before against placing the pilots under the rules of civil service.

PROPELLER ACCIDENT

After a passage of 10 days from St. Nicholas, Aruba, the S. S. Paul Harwood came into port a day late in arriving due to the fact that she lost one of her propeller blades. The propeller blade either dropped off or was knocked off by striking a submerged obstruction. She brought in 65,864 barrels of oil.

DIRECTIONS READY

The Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce announces that full data regarding sailing directions under the proposed plan calling for the establishment of the two-way steamship lanes in Long Island Sound between Point Judith and Stratford Shoals is ready on request.

KARLSHEUE DAMAGED

Collision of the North German Lloyd liner Karlsruhe, bound for Boston from Bremerhaven, while anchored in Bremerhaven Roads may make it impossible for the liner to meet her local schedule. After survey she was ordered to return to port.

NEW DESTROYER

Capable of making a speed of 35 knots an hour, a new destroyer, the Herndon (CG-17) was added to the local Coast Guard fleet. She came up the harbor yesterday from Philadelphia Navy Yard. Under the terms of the treaty limiting naval armament, she comes as one of those transferred from the Navy to the Coast Guard. She will be assigned to offshore patrol duty.

MASSACHUSETTS' CHANCE TO REDEEM HER GOOD NAME

Commonwealth Should Adopt Child Labor Amendment

"THE work is never done while the power to work remains," said Mr. Justice Holmes in acknowledging the tribute of affection that a proud and grateful nation gave this true patriot on his ninetieth birthday.

His work to rid this country of the curse of child labor will not be done while the power of his words remains to inspire his countrymen to fight this battle to a victorious finish.

When the Supreme Court in 1917 declared unconstitutional a child labor law to stop the interstate shipment of child-made goods, Mr. Justice Holmes was joined in dissent by Justices McKenna, Brandeis and Clarke.

In the course of this memorable dissenting opinion, Mr. Justice Holmes said:

"If there is any matter upon which civilized countries have agreed — far more unanimously than they have with regard to intoxicants and some other matters over which this country is now emotional — it is the evil of premature and excessive child labor."

Congress soon thereafter submitted to the states for ratification an amendment to the Constitution giving to the Congress the power "to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age."

Enactment and enforcement of such a federal law would go far toward eradicating throughout the United States what civilized countries have agreed is "the evil of premature and excessive child labor."

No birthday gift to its distinguished son as he begins his ninety-first year could be more appropriate than the ratification by Massachusetts of the child labor amendment that his brave words inspired.

When the Commonwealth of Massachusetts rejected this amendment in 1924, the national welfare was sacrificed to the tyranny of special privilege.

If the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will ratify this amendment, it will not only pay timely homage to the enlightened leadership of Mr. Justice Holmes, but it will also blaze the way for ratification by other states.

Russia as a Laboratory

Smart Business Men Will Gain Much From Experiments There

Depression at home has made American business leaders a little more open-minded toward the Russian Soviet experiment.

Those of us who believe fully in our own type of democracy need not assume an ostrich-like attitude, and shut our eyes to what is going on in the test tubes of a foreign country which is discovering anew the principles of politics and economics in a spirit of violent ruthlessness.

Sam A. Lewisohn, American capitalist who has visited Russia, contends that the Soviet is operating under the forms of capitalism and the spirit of communism. He calls the resultant system "an economic beverage like Sanka or Kaffee Hag with the profit caffeine extracted."

Mr. Lewisohn reports that the elimination of the profit motive, which disciples of Karl Marx have for so long advocated, has failed to solve magically the challenging problems of human relationships.

Even under the new cloak of Sovietism, Mr. Lewisohn finds the same perplexing problems of heightening labor efficiency, of wage disputes, and of other riddles of management.

Writing in the Political Science Quarterly, Mr. Lewisohn concludes:

"Both management and labor behave very much the same under non-profit as under a profit system. Russian experience proves that the abolition of the system of private profit will not cure all the problems of the relations between employer and employee. It brings us to the rather surprising and paradoxical conclusion that there can be a 'labor problem' where there is no conflict between capital and labor."

The inference seems warranted that basic economic problems will survive under most any form of political organization.

Changes in political patterns bring no swift and easy wealth to the disinherited.

The real conflict is between the human race and the penury of nature.

The Soviet has freely borrowed the technique and tools of capitalism.

Modern democratic states, in return, can perhaps adapt for their own purposes the zest for co-ordinated effort which has been articulated in the Russian five-year plan.

Anarchy in business contributes to breakdowns of prosperity, but it is not the only cause. Even in the state-controlled system of Soviet Russia economic crises still recur.

Russia has become a crucible for testing the assumptions of economists, and alert men of business who are not watching the experiment are wasting a fine opportunity for enlightenment.

AN OLD TRICK--BUT IT STILL WORKS

More than eighty per cent of the electrical energy generated in the United States is under the control of holding companies. They constitute the Power Trust.

They are beyond the reach of the present regulatory laws and openly boast that they "REGULATE REGULATION."

Pullman's 100th Birthday

A Story of Human Progress

AN OLD-FASHIONED PULLMAN CAR 60 YEARS AGO WITH ORGAN AND HYMN BOOKS

When George M. Pullman was born at Brocton, N. Y., 100 years ago he made up his mind that he would build a car in which men could sleep—and he succeeded.

All Americans know the Pullman car, all Europe knows it. Some do not realize how interestingly it reflects the progress of science, of comfort and luxury in this fortunate country.

The picture above, published in the "Illustrated London News" 56 years ago, shows a Pullman car of that date.

Since then the hymn books and organ for playing the hymns on Sunday have disappeared from Pullman cars.

Religion is just as popular, but it is not forced upon us in public places.

The old Pullman car of 1859 had one tin washbasin. It was lighted by three candles.

Then came kerosene, the Pintsch light, and then the electric light generated by the moving wheels of the train.

The first Pullman cars were heated by a wood-burning stove, then by hot-air furnaces, then by hot-water from coal-burning heaters, later by live steam from the engine and now by vapor "brought down to atmospheric pressure from the steam in the locomotive."

The old Pullman car had no ventilation. Our quite recent ancestors believed that the "night air is bad for you."

The Pullman windows, about twelve inches square, could not be moved. Now the ventilating of a Pullman car costs almost as much as George M. Pullman's first car cost to build complete. The Pullman car now weighs more than 150,000 pounds; the trucks on which it rides alone weigh more than the original Pullman car.

In one year Pullman cars travel more than 1,206,000,000 miles. The mileage covered by Pullman passengers is more than 14,000,000,000 miles, equal to seventy-two trips to the sun and back.

And the housekeeping department of the Pullman Company would interest women that worry about getting the washing done.

The Pullman housekeepers must keep ready for their guests more than 4,000,000 towels, 2,000,000 sheets, 2,000,000 pillowslips, 500,000 blankets—about 10,000,000 different pieces of washable material. Four million pieces have to be replaced every year, thanks to wear and tear and "absent-minded" travelers that carry the linen away with them.

Modern business is big business in every sense of the word, and it reflects, as nothing else does, the progress of the human race.

Case for Laws—Not Love

By WINIFRED BLACK

New Angle to Marital Problems

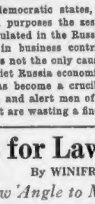
The high courts of New York have just decided that the husband has no such right.



Winifred Black

The woman in this particular instance, a test case, is a young woman of 23.

She is pretty, intelligent and she has a good job.

She doesn't want children and she gives a good many perfectly plain reasons for her feelings in the matter.

The young woman says she does not like children, she does not understand them, they bore her, they bother her.

Furthermore, says the young woman, she likes her job, and, if she had children, she'd have to give up that job. She thinks she makes a much better success as a stenographer than she would as a mother, so she has just come out in plain English and told her husband that she does not intend to have children, no matter what he thinks or what he wishes.

And the husband—what did he do about it?

The husband went out and got an attorney and brought suit for annulment.

Whereupon the young wife left her husband, retained an attorney and fought the suit. The case was brought before the Supreme Court of New York, which handed down the decision that a woman had a perfect right to refuse motherhood, and that her husband could not obtain a legal separation from her on such grounds.

Whew! And there are people alive today who say that the times are really not changing at all.

Ten years ago, such a decision would have been unthinkable.

What a strange case and what strange people.

If she doesn't want to be a mother to this man's children, why does she want to live with the man?

Can you understand that?

And who on earth is this man who is so anxious to have a family of children that he will try to compel his wife to become an unwilling mother, even if he had to drag her into court and tell it to the world?

Is there no longer any such thing as privacy? Must the curtain be rolled up so that every passer-by can look in at the window and see and hear everything that happens in a private home?

Must the whole world listen in on everything, everywhere, all the time?

Is there no such thing as adjustment outside the courts?

Tut, tut, my dear, if you feel that way about children, you had no business to marry and you have no business to stay married — unless your husband feels the same way about it.

What kind of a wife are you, anyway, and what kind of a husband can he possibly be? The whole thing sounds like something out of an unexpurgated Alice-in-Wonderland, but I do believe the White Rabbit, who was such a personage in that most enchanting tale, would have had more delicacy and more common sense than to ask a judge in the Supreme Court to settle such a purely personal matter as that.

Tell it to Sweeny, get out an extra, put it the headlines, make a moving picture of it, have someone sing about it over the radio. That's the new idea.

Somehow it seems just a little out of taste to me.

New York Day by Day

While Strolling

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 13—Thoughts while strolling: The newest color combination from Paris—gray and yellow. They say Cissie Loftus will not be alone a moment. Statue sellers with turbans and rings in their ears—born on Forsythe street. Billy Guard's blackthorn stick.

Artist C. N. Landon, a Norwalk, O., boy, who made good in the city. Few things so calamitous at the moment as a broken finger nail. A lady in a creamy whipcord suit and black stockings. Albert Crockett, once Bennett's favorite reporter. Now press agenting the St. Regis.

Belle Living, stone's "salon" dark and curtained. You can't beat those women's exchange places for dainties. White-haired messenger "boys" shuffling along with heads bowed. Now they are dipping potato chips in Easter egg colors. John Erskine window shopping.

Wish I could run across someone who would listen while I reminisce about early hardships. Phil Simms sports a monocle. Percy Crosby is certainly worked up about this Al Capone business—buying page ads, to speak his mind. A few more of us need to get excited in the same way.

Katherine Cornell is never seen twice in the same fur coat. Those brittle women who never miss a morning lecture at Town Hall. Examplars of the new freedom. They say Elsie Ferguson makes a swell speech. Not using notes "because they destroy motivation for spontaneity." Imagine!

Tourists rounding in from Mediterranean cruises. Ed Graham, the artist. Everybody is putting chains on apartment doors these days. And Iturbe, the Spanish pianist, is the talk of the music world. Ladies whose smiles suggest white coral.

Helen Menken's slender figure. And the bright coppery sheen of her hair. The smell of cabbage to me suggests washtubs. And I might garland that with a quaint epigram. But it would sound snobbish. This town is overrun with snobs as it is.

Damon Runyon is one of Broadway's human complexities. He has the vitality of the people about whom he writes and consequently has a good time anywhere. He rarely goes to bed until dawn, sitting about here and there with gay groups, slipping only black coffee. He gives an outward display of extreme leisure, yet he probably produces more copy than any other writer. And excellent copy, too.

With times on the upswing, valets are again in slight demand. The going has been tough for some time. Valets take such names as Hodgkins, Godchaux and Meadows because it gives them a stage glamour and makes the job easier to land. An agency tells me those of a taciturn nature hold their jobs longest. Many valets talk themselves out of a job. I've always ached for one of P. G. Wodehouse's valets. You know! Jeeves, the gentleman's gentleman.

Visiting an English country home for the week end with Frazier Hunt one time, a melancholy valet was assigned to us. His name was Plunkler and he suggested Arnold Bennett, even to his high white crest. He came in the first morning with a bowl of water and placed it gravely between our beds. And waited deferentially. Finally Hunt said he wasn't thirsty and I acted as though I had fallen back to sleep. We learned he was just trying to show us the temperature of the "bawth." Fawncy!

O, yes, we went later to the "morning room" for a buffet breakfast off the hunting table — sideboard in Gallipolis. Among the tidbits was smoked sausage neatly skewered on pikes. But we arrived late and only one sausage was left. We were wrestling for it when the Duchess or whoever the hostess was popped in. She packed an ear trumpet, lorgnette and high handshake. So you can imagine how we spun into a quick dwindle.

From the Arkansas Grimmick: "O. O. McIntyre threatens to visit the Ozarks. A lot of the boys are peeping over the ridges and waiting and there are many empty gun racks over front doors."

That's practically all I want to know.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

How Shall I Live?

AILEEN HAS written me a strange letter.

Aileen is a sophomore in college—a bright, healthy, popular American girl—sensitive, with fine ideals and a good disposition. The future should seem a bright and open thoroughfare to a girl like that, shouldn't it? But it doesn't.

Elsie Robinson

"I'm so bewildered, Miss Robinson," she cries. "I have everything I really need in the way of material comfort, and I suppose I always will have. That isn't what bothers me. What I want to know is HOW SHALL I LIVE? When you are in college you hear so much different advice about how to live, and you see so many different experiments being tried out. There are many who believe that the main thing in life is to express and develop one's own emotion. Others say that you should live to succeed, to 'get ahead' either in business or a profession. Others are always going in for 'causes,' waging some sort of campaign or reform. Others live only for art. And others say that service is the only right ideal.

"I don't think I am abnormal, but there are many sides to my nature and I am sure that, if I set my mind to it, I could pattern my life along any of those lines. But which line is the best? You can't know how many young people in college puzzle over that. People think that college girls and men only think of jazz, or worry about their courses. That isn't so. Even if we've decided on a profession there's still the question—HOW SHALL WE LIVE? To develop ourselves? To serve others?

I can give it to you in two words, Aileen—LIVE GALLANTLY!

You may not know what life is all about. None of us does. You may be confronted with sorrow and sordidness, viciousness and injustice and cruelty that seem rooted in the very nature of things. You cannot explain this seeming wrong. Don't try. No one can explain it. No one can escape it. But there is one thing you can do, even when you walk through darkness.

YOU CAN LIVE GALLANTLY!

You can live as though you were on a shining adventure, even though you can't prove it is a shining adventure.

You can live as though honesty and courage, purity and unselfishness, tenderness and patience were supremely worth while—even though they may not always seem worth while.

Though, at times, human beings may seem clowns, or cravens, you can act as if you yourself were a poet, a saint, a brave crusader, a high-hearted adventurer—a tall god.

You can't understand life. Aileen—nor escape it—and you can do very little to change it—BUT YOU CAN LIVE IT GALLANTLY. AS THOUGHT TRUTH WOULD ULTIMATELY TRIUMPH OVER ALL ITS DARKNESS AND DESPAIR.

Yes, I know it's taking a sporting chance.

But, after all, isn't it better to bet on beauty and live in hope of truth than accept some shabby compromise?

"But what if there isn't anything after all?" you cry. "What if there is no other life?
